ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I owe a debt of gratitude to many people who assisted me during the course of this work. The Australian National University not only offered me a scholarship, but provided me with generous funds to carry out my research in the Department of Prehistory and Anthropology. I thank Dr Richard Davis, who helped me to see the possibilities of the topic in the early stages of my work, and Professor Anthony Forge has provided supervision over the duration of my study. Dr Baas Terwiel and Dr Gehan Wijeyewardene have both given me the benefit of their own experience in their patient help with this thesis. I also wish to thank Dr Anthony Diller and Mrs Lek McFadden, who gave me an excellent training in the intricacies of the Thai language before my trip to the field. Dr Diller has also given his time generously to help with translations. Dr Craig Reynolds of the History Department at Sydney University provided sage advice at several stages of this work.

The Thais who gave generously of themselves and of their time during my field trip are legion. I am very grateful to my sponsor, Khun La'or Mathyakom, and to Khun Vorachai, who both helped me to find my feet in Bangkok. I also thank the staff of the Department of Anthropology at Sinlapakon University, especially Aacaan Srisakara and Aacaan Pranii, who helped me not only with much good advice, but also very practical assistance, and who rallied students to provide me with skilled assistance with the administration of the questionnaire used. Students of the Department of Social Work at Thammasat University also provided expert help for this questionnaire.
Above all I must thank the monks and maechii at Wat Paaknaam, who tolerated persistent enquiries with genuine enthusiasm, for helping me to understand their religion. The abbot and the head of the maechii both helped to make my visit to the wat informative. Maechii La'ong Nuang in particular generously gave me the benefits of her experience mixed with that rare degree of understanding which makes the field-worker's task both easier and more enriching. Phra Phichaay generously made available to me his excellent collection of historical and recent photographs of the wat. Khun Triitaa agreed to take on the task of introducing me to the wat. Of course, many maechii at the wat befriended me, and made my visits enjoyable.

Maechii at the Nuns' Institute found time to answer endless questions in spite of heavy workloads, and Maechii Sumon Yuuyoot hosted my stay at the Ratburi school for maechii for which she is partly responsible. These maechii shared with me their understanding of Buddhism at a coherent level, while ensuring that they did not belittle the beliefs of others.

Many other Buddhists, both lay and ordained, took an interest in my work and were enthusiastic in discussing issues with me. Aacaan Sa'aad of Wat Thammamongkhon and Phra Chayaphorn of Wat Khryawan gave me the benefit of their considerable knowledge of Buddhist history and practice. Aacaan Chatsumarn Kabilsingh spent much time explaining more esoteric matters of doctrine.

Several officers at the Department of Religious Affairs were amenable to interruptions and provided me with information with courtesy. The National Research Council of Thailand kindly granted me permission to carry out research in Thailand.
Finally, I have to thank my family and friends for the encouragement and help they have given me at all stages of this thesis. They are too many to mention, but I must thank Diane Smith for her superior skills in producing the map in Figure 1.

I am deeply indebted to Mr Sanjay Sircar, who gave unstintingly of his time to help clarify both issues and syntax in this thesis at a late stage. Any errors of style or fact are, of course, my own responsibility.
