CHINESE DIALECTS & ROMANISATION.

The ordinary people of Shanghai as with most people in central and southern China in the 19th century spoke a distinct dialect [the Wu dialect]\(^3\) that had some links to Mandarin, the official language used by the Chinese intellectual elite (literati or scholar-gentry) and an essential element in Chinese national administration. The Rev. John Liggins of the American Church Mission provided this report describing a literati from Beijing:

Mr. Zung, the teacher from Pekin referred to in my journal of yesterday, came to see me this afternoon. My teacher had gone ashore to seek for a house to rent, and as he was away four hours, I was deprived of his assistance in conversing with Mr. Zung. He was quite able, however, to understand the Shanghai dialect which I spoke, though I could understand but very little of the Pekin Mandarin which he spoke.\(^4\)

The Protestant missionaries were committed to providing the Bible and other Christian literature into local dialects, generally using a romanized form that uneducated people found easier to read and understand that classical characters. Eugene Stock of the Church Missionary Society summed up the general attitude:

It was at this time that the romanized system of transliterating and printing Chinese was adopted. It was found that the written language (Wen-li) was only known to the educated few; that the masses could not be reached by it; and that it was easier for an illiterate Chinaman to learn the Roman alphabet. Hence was undertaken the difficult task of transliteration; or rather—for this term is not strictly applicable—of reducing the spoken languages to writing with Eoman letters. This has proved in some districts a very successful method of instructing the humbler classes.\(^5\)

There are a number of contemporary missionary publications dealing with the issue of romanized Shanghai dialect. Similar publications exist for other dialect groups. See, for example: Edkins, J., A Vocabulary of the Shanghai Dialect, (Shanghai, Presbyterian Mission Press, 1869).

The impact of local dialects on this collection is a major problem in identifying modern names and locations.

As a result of the universal teaching of Mandarin Chinese in all educational institutions regional dialects in modern China are in decline.\(^6\) The combination of local dialects with variant phonetic written renderings makes it difficult, and in most cases impossible, to provide readers with place or personal names in modern usage.

THE CHUNG HUA SHENG HUNG HUI,
[The Holy Catholic Church in China—The Anglican Church in China.]
Chronology of the period 1835-1865.

(Please note that some amendments have been made to the text.)

In the chronology that follows, entries are listed under the following abbreviations:
General (prior to formation of dioceses or relating to various areas)

[HK]  Hong Kong diocese (Victoria)
[FU]  Fujian (Fukien) diocese
[ZH]  Zhejiang (Chekiang) diocese
[SI]  Shanghai diocese
[SG]  Shandong (Shantung) diocese
[NC]  North China diocese
[HA]  Hankou (Hankow) diocese
[O]  Other dioceses

1835  Americans Rev. Henry Lockwood and Rev. Francis Hanson arrived in Guangzhou. They found that they could do little there because of suspicion and hostility.

1836  An edict appeared in Guangzhou forbidding Chinese to become Christians and forbidding the dissemination of Christianity. Lockwood and Hanson moved to Singapore, and after few months, to Djakarta [then Batavia] where they devoted themselves to learning Chinese and Malay. They also began a school for Chinese children.

1837  American clergyman Rev. William Jones Boone arrived at Djakarta. Lockwood and Hanson returned to America, for reasons of health.

1840  Boone went to Macao for reasons of health.

1840-1842  Vincent Stanton a British freelance missionary on the China coast.

1841  Boone moved to Xiamen [Xiamen], Fujian. Death of Mrs. Sally Boone from cholera.

1842  Treaty of Nanjing. Five ports opened to foreign residence: Guangzhou, Xiamen, Fuzhou, Ningbo, Shanghai

1843  Boone returned to U.S. to place children with family and to recruit more workers; he brought with him two Chinese, one of whom was Huang Guang Cai. See http://www.bdcconline.net/en/stories/h/huang-guangcai.php

[HK]  Rev. Vincent Stanton appointed Colonial Chaplain Hong Kong, a portion of his stipend provided by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel (SPG). Built a church [on site of present St. John’s Cathedral] and established an institution [later St. Paul's College] to train Chinese catechists and teachers.

1844  US Episcopal House of Bishops appointed Boone as “Missionary Bishop” in Xiamen and other parts of China for the American Church Mission (ACM).

Boone returns to China, accompanied by two clergy and their wives and three women teachers.

Rev. George Smith and Rev. Thomas McClatchie sent by CMS to visit Hong Kong and the five Treaty ports.

1845  Boone and company arrived in Hong Kong. Decided to settle in Shanghai, as instructed by ACM committee.

Smith and McClatchie arrived in Shanghai where McClatchie settled. After continuing his tour of the Treaty ports, Smith concluded that the CMS should begin work in Shanghai and Ningbo, and, if possible, also at Fuzhou. Smith reported to the CMS... committee that China needed a body of preaching missionaries, not primarily teachers. This was in contrast to the ACM, which stressed the importance of schools.

[SI] McClatchie rented a house within the walls of the old city of Shanghai; could preach fluently in Shanghai dialect by end of 1847; had translated parts of Church of England prayer book.

1846 [SI] Boys' school begun by Bishop Boone; boys taught mainly in English by Miss Emma Jones and Miss Mary Morse. Boone also involved in translation of New Testament. ACM began evangelistic work - preaching, distribution of tracts. Huang Guang Cai baptized by Bishop Boone.

[SI] First Holy Trinity Church in Shanghai opened to be parish church for Church of England business community. Present Holy Trinity Church opened 1868. Closed after Communist Revolution in 1949 and returned to China Christian Council, the Protestant Church body in China. There is no Anglican church in modern China, outside Hong Kong and Macao.

1849 [HK] Smith consecrated Colonial Anglican Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong, with oversight of all British Anglican work in the Far East. Until 1861 there was little work directly with Chinese in Hong Kong, primarily chaplaincy work among Europeans.

[FU] CMS decided to begin work in Fuzhou. Work in Fujian was under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Victoria, Hong Kong, until 1906.

[ZH] Rev. Frederick Foster Gough came to join Russell in Ningbo.

[SI] St. Paul's Church opened as centre for CMS work. Christ Church (Chinese) consecrated, first regular church building of ACM.

1851 [ZH] First baptisms by Anglicans in Zhejiang - a tailor, Pao Hsueh-i, and a servant of Russell's, Hou Yueh-li. Early years in Zhejiang more promising than in Fujian.

[SI] Three additional missionaries joined ACM: Rev. and Mrs. Robert Nelson, and Miss Lydia Mary Fay. Miss Emma Jones began boarding school for girls.

[SI] Rev. Huang Guang Cai ordained as deacon.

[ZH] Russell married adopted daughter of Miss Mary Aldersey, a Congregationalist who started the first school for girls in China in Ningbo, 1844. Aldersey later transferred part of her work to the CMS committee.

1853 [SI] English Bishop of Hong Kong Rt. Rev. George Smith made a primary visitation of CMS work in Shanghai. Informal agreement made by Bishop Smith and Bishop Boone to avoid jurisdictional conflicts.

1853-1854 [SI] Church work affected in Shanghai by local Triad Rebellion led by Cantonese and Fujianese residents.

1854 [FU] School started by Welton.

[ZH] Romanized Chinese script devised by Russell and others used in Anglican schools in Zhejiang.

[SI] CMS missionary Rev. John Shaw Burdon arrived in Shanghai; did extensive itineration work outside of Shanghai.

[ZH] Attempts made to begin work outside of Ningbo.

1856 [SI] Another Chinese ordained as deacon, Rev. Tong (Tung) Chu Kiung of Suzhou - first graduate of the mission school to be ordained.

1858  [FU] Additional CMS missionary arrived, Rev. George Smith, (not the bishop). Until 1860 work proceeded very slowly in Fuzhou; CMS considered abandoning Fuzhou to concentrate on Zhejiang. Smith urged perseverance.

[ZH] Rev. George Evans Moule of CMS began work in Ningbo. Episcopal visit by Bishop George Smith; conference held including Chinese staff. At their insistence it was decided to begin work in Hangzhou.

1859  [ZH] Rev. J.S. Burdon made a visit of investigation to Hangzhou. Early efforts were not hindered. CMS sent catechists Pao Hsueh-i and Stephen Ch'en, and English priest Rev. Thomas Samuel Fleming. Burdon requested by Chinese authorities to leave during second Opium War.

[SI] ACM and CMS working in Shanghai. Bishop of Victoria proposed that CMS focus on work in Zhejiang province and ACM in Jiangsu province (including Shanghai). Archbishop of Canterbury rejected proposal as English law did not allow joint jurisdiction but encouraged informal cooperation.

[ZH] Burdon and Fleming began work in Yuyao near Shaoxing until forced to withdraw to Ningbo by Tai'ping rebels.

1861  [FU] Four Chinese baptized. Situation improved rapidly for a time.

[SI] Americans Rev. Henry M. Parker and Rev. Dudley D. Smith left Shanghai to settle in Yantai (Chefoo), Shandong.

[SG] Parker and Smith and their wives sent to begin work in Yantai (Chefoo); they soon moved to a nearby village. About six months after his arrival Parker, along with an American Baptist missionary, Holmes, was beheaded by Tai'ping rebels.

1861-1865  [SI] ACM work suffered because of Civil War in U.S. No money supplied for three years. Within a few years the ACM mission was reduced from twelve clergy, four candidates for orders, and twelve women missionaries to two priests, one deacon, one ordinand, two women missionaries.

1862  [HK] Rev. Thomas Stringer (CMS) sent to begin regular mission work among Chinese of Hong Kong. Diocesan Native Female School started with Miss Baxter in charge; funded largely by European residents of Hong Kong.

[SG] Dudley Smith returned to U.S. with his daughter following his wife's death.

[NC] Burdon of CMS was first Anglican missionary to settle in Beijing. Lithuanian-American Rev. Samuel I.J. Schereshevsky arrived later in year, seeking to improve his knowledge of the Mandarin dialect.

[FU] Smith died, leaving to Wolfe's care 13 baptized Christians and five catechumens; Wolfe soon forced to Hong Kong for health reasons. With no Anglican missionaries remaining in Fuzhou, Church people were shepherded by catechist Huang Ch’iu-teh.

[SI] Collins followed Burdon to Beijing; Shanghai without a CMS missionary for some years.

[SI] Huang Guang Cai made first Chinese Anglican priest, given charge of Christ Church.

Dr. J.A. Stewart, first SPG missionary sent to China, settled in Beijing. Joined by young priest F.R. Mitchell.

Bishop Smith resigned; replaced by Rt. Rev. Charles Alford.

CMS property attacked in Fuzhou. Wolfe, returning from Hong Kong, obtained compensation from Chinese authorities and buildings were rebuilt. Rev. Arthur William Cribb arrived in Fuzhou. For several years there was relatively rapid expansion of the Church in Fujian, largely through the efforts of Wolfe. Work was begun in Lianjiang, Luoyuan, Gutian, Ningde, and Xiapu.

Girls' school opened in Fuzhou by CMS - only Anglican organised educational work in area.

Conditions began to improve after Tai'ping turmoil. Work begun in Hangzhou by G.E. Moule and catechist Tsang.

Bishop William Jones Boone died in Shanghai. Boone can be considered as much as any the founder of the Zhonghua Shenggong Hui. No successor consecrated for two years after his death. Rev. Elliot H. Thomson and Rev. Huang Guang Cai continued the work in Shanghai and spread it to Suzhou.

Steward recalled by SPG committee in London for purchasing a site for the mission work without authorization. Mitchell went to Shanghai.

By this time, Burdon and Schereshevsky had translated most of the Prayer Book into Mandarin and were working on translation of the Bible. They were part of a committee that also included McClatchie (CMS), Rev. Joseph Edkins (London Missionary Society), Rev. W.A.P. Martin (American Presbyterian), and Rev. Henry Blodget (American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions). Schereshevsky spoke at CMS evangelistic meetings.

Charles Frederick Warren continued work of Stringer among Chinese.

Opium refuge opened in Hangzhou.

Visualizing Cultures weds images and scholarly commentary in innovative ways to illuminate social and cultural history. Founded in 2002 by MIT Professors John Dower and Shigeru Miyagawa, Visualizing Cultures exploits the unique qualities of the Web as a publishing platform to enable scholars, teachers, and others to: (1) examine large bodies of previously inaccessible images; (2) compose original texts with unlimited numbers of full-color, high-resolution images; and (3) use new technology to explore unprecedented ways of analyzing and presenting images that open windows on modern history.

Visualizing Cultures is a gateway to seeing history through images that once had wide circulation among peoples of different times and places. We do historical research this way as scholars to better understand how people saw themselves, how they saw others including foreigners and enemies, and how in turn others saw them. Visualizing Cultures presents images from the historical record uncensored. It is not an art-history or art-appreciation site. Displaying images from the historical record does not represent an endorsement of their content.
