Biographical notes on Members of the Tasmanian Parliament 1851-1960	1-173

INTRODUCTION

This work is the seventh volume in the series of parliamentary biographical registers published intermittently since 1959 by ANU Press. With its publication only South Australia is lacking any coverage.

The 543 entries are arranged alphabetically. The work was begun as a listing of members from self-government (1856), but we were prevailed upon to include the members of the 'blended' Legislative Council of 1851-56. Of these both the elected and the appointed members have been listed.

Each member's entry follows the pattern established by earlier volumes, though a few minor changes have been made in the ordering of the data. After the name and party (where relevant), the first paragraph lists occupation, date and place of birth, parentage, date and place of marriage, children, death details and religion. A brief outline of the extra-parliamentary career follows in the second paragraph. Details of Tasmanian parliamentary membership follow, with separate paragraphs for the fully-appointed Legislative Council of pre-1851, the Council of 1851-56, and the fully-elected Parliament that symbolised the transition to self-government. Unsuccessful contests, ministerial positions, and parliamentary posts are included here. For a few entries an extra detail is membership of other Parliaments. Reference to the most useful sources for each entry is appended, although in a few cases this is not practicable.

Biographical information of this type has not been kept in any systematic fashion by the Tasmanian Parliament or the Parliamentary Library, although the latter body has recently begun to do so. Sources varied greatly, ranging from press obituaries to official publications, from memoirs to general histories, from local histories to family works. Unpublished sources were of great importance, and letters and oral information are indicated by the phrase 'personal communication'. The basic list of members between 1851 and 1856 was compiled from the Votes & Proceedings of the Council, together with the Hobart Town Gazette and the contemporary press. A useful listing of the members after 1856 is P.T. McKay and E. Pickup, The Parliament of Tasmania 1856-1973 (Hobart, 1973), although this was found not to be complete. We hope this register establishes the correct listing.

We cannot but agree with Thomson and Serle's comment in the Victorian volume when they claimed that there could be 'few areas of historical research in which the primary material is so unreliable', and much time was spent checking information. Unfortunately, verification of doubtful material was not always possible, so there are many question marks to be seen in the work, while the words 'possibly' and 'probably' appear a number of times. We would be naive to suppose that errors have not been enshrined in the work, but it is our hope that its publication will cause readers to send us the details of any errors or omissions that they find.

Many pages would be necessary to list all the people who have assisted us so generously. Of particular importance were the staffs of the Archives Office of Tasmania, the National Library, the Australian Dictionary of Biography, the Parliamentary Library in Hobart, and the State Electoral Office. Geoffrey Stilwell of the State Library of Tasmania gave us many valuable clues, as did Ian Pearce, Mary Nicholls and Barbara Valentine of the same institution. The generosity of the Tasmanian Registrar-General and Attorney-General in aiding our search of the official records deserves special mention, as does the willingness of the ANU to give one of us research time and air fares. Immensely valuable assistance of a much more personal kind was given by Ken and Dorothy Godfrey and Lee and Margaret Glover, all of Hobart, and Arthur and Lorna Hamblly of Canberra. Marcia Murphy and Jeanette Williams typed the drafts and the many letters.

NOTES ON PROCEDURE

Names

The names used are those found in the parliamentary journals. In the cases of G.E.B. Moore and P.G. Pollard this usage changed, and brackets indicate the names adopted.

Occupation

The occupation or occupations held before entering Parliament are listed.

Children

This is a point where error can easily occur. On many occasions, only those children who survive their parent are mentioned in the press at the time of the member's death. Stillborn children are not deliberately included, though all others are where known, regardless of the age at death. Where possible, adopted and step-children are identified as such.

Relationships with other parliamentarians

Relationships with members of the Tasmanian Parliament predominate, but relationships with members of other Parliaments are included. Only relatively close relationships have been included - second cousins and great-uncles are not mentioned, for example.

Religion

It is difficult to be certain about an individual's religion. Members can be chary about discussing such matters, while descendants often seek to attach a religious label. Because of this, no religious affiliation is given in many entries. A burial service conducted according to the rites of a particular church has not normally been taken as evidence by itself.

Extra-parliamentary career

Education details are followed by occupation, as well as memberships of various professional, government, business and social bodies. When war service is included, only the highest rank achieved is mentioned. For government posts the order is local, State, Commonwealth. Generally, the most senior position held in a government body is the one included. For JP positions the date given is that of the first appointment, and no effort is made to distinguish between local and territorial appointment. Any particular interests a member may have had, such as the advocacy of temperance or daylight saving, are given.

Dates of membership of Parliament

The month and year of membership is included for Tasmanian parliamentary membership from 1851, but not for membership in the pre-1851 Legislative Council or in other Parliaments. On the advice of Tasmanian parliamentary officers, the memberships date from midnight preceding the day of election, rather than the date of swearing-in (in fact, a few members were never sworn in). The conclusions of terms date from death, defeat or resignation; the resignation dates are not always certain. Resignations which occurred after the acceptance of ministerial office have been ignored - if the member was re-elected the term is regarded as continuous, while if he was defeated the term is said to have ended at the midnight preceding the by-election. If a seat was declared vacant due to non-attendance and the man so affected re-contested unsuccessfully, the term was said to have ended at the date of the election. For the period when a member unsuccessfully contesting a Commonwealth election was guaranteed automatic re-election to the Tasmanian Parliament, the term is taken as continuous, as in the cases of A.W. Loone and J.A. Lyons. In the case of voided elections, membership of the Parliament is taken as not having occurred, even though the individual may have been sworn in.

Unsuccessful contests

The listing here may not be complete. There appear to be no official records for nineteenth century elections, and many press reports did not list candidates' forenames or even initials. Inclusion of a candidate on the ballot paper after his withdrawal from a contest is noted where known, but errors here would be easy to make.

Party membership

The guide here has been Colin A. Hughes and B.D. Graham, A Handbook of Australian Government and Politics 1890-1964 (Canberra, 1968), with the first identifiable party classification on the conservative side being the Anti-Socialists of the 1909 election. Most Legislative Councillors have sat as Independents, thus no party is mentioned; if a Councillor contested any election as a party member, this affiliation is listed. The use of parentheses refers to contests in Commonwealth elections, and the ordering of all references is chronological.

Ministerial posts

The details are those listed in the successive issues of parliamentary journals.

Sources

A few entries were gleaned from a scattering of very brief references, and therefore no sources are listed. Newspapers published in Tasmania have been listed without their place of publication.

General usage

1. Unless the name Van Diemen's Land appears in a title (e.g. VDL Bank), the name Tasmania is used throughout.
2. If a place name is Tasmanian, the State reference is omitted.
3. Except for the electorate of Hobart Town, the name Hobart is used throughout.
4. Although at their creation the word 'Municipal' was used, reference throughout is to the Hobart City Council and the Launceston City Council.
5. Hamilton-on-Forth is referred to as Forth.

No mention is made of events occurring after 31 July 1979.
