

Richard Baker short biography:

Professor Richard Baker commenced as the Pro Vice-Chancellor (University Experience) at ANU in April 2013. Prior to taking up this Professor Richard Baker had a long history of educational leadership at ANU. Trained in the fields of geography and archaeology at ANU and the University of Adelaide, he has also worked at the Northern Territory Museum and the National Museum of Australia. His research has focussed on issues related to Indigenous Land management and how to effectively link teaching and research.