Acknowledgements

I would like to thank Faye Ginsburg and Rayna Rapp, Penelope-Jane Saunders, Valerie Fleming, Clive Moore, Robin Hide, Michael Alpers, the library staff of the Australian Institute of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Studies, contributors to our forthcoming volume on Maternities and Modernities: Colonial and Postcolonial Experiences in Asia and the Pacific for source material used, and especially Margaret Jolly as my supervisor for her encouragement and active support in undertaking the challenging task of compiling this bibliography. Thanks to Daniel Fritsch for assistance in setting up the database file and to Ling Matsay for giving me a helping hand with the final computer formatting, to Ria van de Zandt for her careful checking of the final version, to the IRU and ANU Printing for design and printing, and to all my colleagues who offered support and advice. Special thanks to those who supplied the photographs and to Bob Cooper and Darren Boyd from the Coombs Photography Unit for their reproduction.

This bibliography has been supported by funds from the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, The Australian National University, Canberra, Australia.

Introduction

The focus of this bibliography is pregnancy, childbirth and infant nurture. Although it includes works on mothering, later child care and development, and the phases of the reproductive life cycle, these are not focal. In addition, it includes a selection of works on puberty rites and male initiation. This bibliography is not exhaustive, but it contains most of the important contemporary titles—books, chapters in books, papers, journal articles and theses—focusing on these topics. It includes references to some practical manuals for mothers, doctors, midwives, as well as academic texts. I have drawn primarily on anthropological and sociological texts and have also included some historical, demographic, psychological, medical, and legal works, yet have cited only a select number of references from the burgeoning literature on abortion, reproductive rights and new reproductive technologies.

The entries are arranged by region, thus:

- General, theoretical and comparative
- Africa, Middle East
- Asia
- Australia, New Zealand
- Europe
- Mexico, Central and South America
- North America
- Pacific

The geographical categories are conventional, but it should be noted that areas proximate to Eastern Europe are included under Europe, while Turkey appears under Asia. Those works which are of a more general and theoretical character, or which refer to three or more countries, are listed under the first heading; those works which refer to two countries or categories are to be found under entries for both. In the case of a collection where only one or two papers might be relevant, both the individual papers and the book are cited separately. All entries are arranged in alphabetical order of first-named authors and in chronological order within—that is, irrespective of single or multiple authorship.

The references are primarily to recent publications—the material on Aboriginal Australia, for example, concentrates on the last twenty years. The bibliography covers works in English up to the year 1995.
