THE PACIFIC MANUSCRIPTS BUREAU was established in 1968 to promote the preservation of unpublished manuscripts relating to the Pacific Islands. It is a non-profit-making organisation sponsored by five libraries in Australia, New Zealand and the United States specialising in Pacific research. The libraries are: The Mitchell Library, Sydney; National Library of Australia, Canberra; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; National Library of New Zealand, Wellington; and the Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu.

The Bureau is operated on the libraries' behalf by the Research School of Pacific Studies of the Australian National University. The specific aim of the Bureau is to locate manuscripts which may be of value, either now or in the future, to research workers engaged in any branch of Pacific studies, whether historical, literary or scientific, and to obtain copies of them on microfilm for its member libraries. The Bureau's area of interest comprises all the Pacific Islands, including Hawaii and New Guinea.

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

This volume assembles between two covers information on the microfilmed records of the Catholic Church in islands of the Western Pacific entrusted to the Marist Order as a field of evangelisation. Since 1966, the islands have been subdivided into two archdioceses and six dioceses. The archdioceses, called Suva and Noumea, respectively cover the islands of Fiji, including Rotuma, and New Caledonia and its dependencies. The dioceses are those of Wallis and Futuna, Tonga, Samoa and Tokelau, Vanuatu (formerly New Hebrides), North Solomons (with headquarters at Kieta) and South Solomons (with headquarters at Honiara).

The Marist Order (Society of Mary) was canonically approved in April 1836 after the Sacred Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith in Rome had sought means of evangelising the western half of the Pacific. The eastern half had been entrusted to the Sacred Heart (Picpus) Order in 1833. The Marists, originally an informal grouping of diocesan priests, accepted the task in the Western Pacific provided they were recognised as an independent religious order.

The first Marists sailed for the Pacific in December 1836 under the leadership of Bishop Jean-Baptiste Pompallier. The bishop established his headquarters in New Zealand while some of his missionaries were left on the islands of Wallis and Futuna. However, the huge vicariate under Pompallier's care soon proved too large to be practicable and in 1842 part of it was carved off to form the Vicariate of Central Oceania. This new vicariate comprised the islands of Wallis, Futuna, New Caledonia, New Hebrides, Samoa, Tokelau, Fiji, Rotuma, Niue and the Gilbert Islands. A few years later, before any Marist missionaries had set foot there, the Gilbert Islands were made part of a new vicariate of Micronesia. The records described in this volume cover the islands embraced by the Vicariate of Central Oceania excluding the Gilbert Islands, plus the North and South Solomons which were reinstated as Marist responsibilities in 1897-98.

As will be seen, the volume contains eight separate inventories. Seven of them relate to records of the Marist Order copied on nearly 400 reels of microfilm under a project carried out by Father Theo B. Cook, SM, while serving as archivist of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji. The other inventory concerns similar records microfilmed in 1972 by the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau.

The microfilms containing the material described in the first seven inventories are numbered OMPA 1 to OMPA 400 inclusive except that numbers OMPA 75 to OMPA 79 were not used. The microfilms of the remainder bear the prefix PMB. The inventories are individually paginated. They appear in the volume as follows:

- OMPA 1 - 25: Diocese of Tonga
- 26 - 74: Diocese of Samoa and Tokelau
- 80 - 100: Marist Fathers, Rome
- 101 - 126: Diocese of Wallis and Futuna
- 127 - 178: Diocese of Port Vila
- 179 - 360: Archdiocese of Noumea
- 361 - 400: Oceania Marist Province Archives
- PMB (various) : Archdiocese of Suva

It will be seen from the foregoing list that no records were microfilmed in the archives of the two Solomon Islands dioceses. However, some records concerning those dioceses - and, indeed, all of the other dioceses and archdioceses - appear in the inventory for the Oceania Marist Province Archives (films OMPA 361 to OMPA 400).

Because the first seven inventories were originally issued separately, some of the introductory material in each is repetitive. On the other hand, there are minor discrepancies from one introduction to another as to the libraries in which copies of the OMPA microfilms have been deposited. This is because the number of libraries grew as the inventories were produced. The complete list of those libraries is:

National Library of Australia, Canberra

Mitchell Library, Sydney

State Library of Victoria, Melbourne

Library, Australian National University, Canberra

Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand

Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu

Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla

Library, University of Papua New Guinea, Boroko

Archives de France, 60 rue des Francs-Bourgeois, 75141, Paris

Archivio Padri Maristi, Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152, Rome.

All of the OMPA inventories were prepared by the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau from material supplied by Father Cook. Much of that work involved the liberal use of scissors and paste. As it was not envisaged initially that the inventories would be gathered together in a single volume, no attempt was made to ensure uniformity of lay-out between one inventory and another. If some unevenness in this respect is now all too obvious, it is hoped that it will not distract users from the enormous amount of useful information that the volume contains. The same sentiment also applies to the 'Franglais' that has crept into one or two of the inventories for easily appreciated reasons.

Only thirty copies of this volume are being produced.

INTRODUCTION

This catalogue provides a guide to the records of the Catholic diocese of Tonga held at Bishop's House, Havelu-loto, Tonga. The records have been copied on 25 reels of microfilm under a project of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji. They are numbered OMPA 1 to OMPA 25 inclusive. Microfilms of the archival holdings of other Catholic dioceses and parishes in the Western Pacific have also been made. They are the subjects of separate catalogues. The original negatives of all the films are held by the Oceania Marist Province Archives. Copies of them have been made available to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research through the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau, Research School of Pacific Studies, Australian National University, Canberra. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; and Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla. Sets of all the films have also been deposited in the Archivio Padri Maristi (Marist Fathers Archives), Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy.

The project to microfilm records of Catholic endeavour in the Western Pacific grew out of an earlier plan simply to salvage and classify such records as did exist. The first Marist missionaries in the Pacific had arrived in 1837; they had had a base in Sydney since 1847; and Sydney became the headquarters of their Province of Oceania when this was formed in 1898. The headquarters were moved to Suva in 1971. Meanwhile, in June 1966, the local bishops had become legal owners of the previous Vicariates' archives following the extensive ecclesiastical reorganisation of that time. The initiative to salvage and classify those archives came from the Marist Fathers and was wholeheartedly supported by the local bishops through the Conference Episcopale du Pacifique (CEPAC). Funds for the project were provided and the Rev. Dr Theo B. Cook, SM, was appointed to take charge of it. He began with the diocesan archives in Vila but soon realised that the project's limited aims should be widened to include the compilation of catalogues of the records and the microfilming of them. Three considerations lay behind the idea of microfilming the records: (1) that it preserved and conserved the original documents; (2) that it could make copies available to scholars who could not otherwise have access to them; and (3) that it could bring all diocesan holdings together in the Oceania Marist Province Archives, thus establishing it as a centre for research on the history of the Catholic Church and the Marist Fathers in the South Pacific.

The holdings of the diocesan archives consist largely of: (1) correspondence and reports exchanged between Church leaders in the Pacific and their ecclesiastical or religious superiors elsewhere (in Rome, Lyons, Paris, etc.), most of the documents having been preserved at the receiving end; and (2) correspondence and reports exchanged between missionaries and their bishops within the Pacific, which are usually preserved if directed to a bishop but not when directed to a missionary.

Although the diocesan archives are private collections, their owners, the bishops, agreed to make them and the microfilms of them available for scholarly research provided:

(1) documents of a date more recent than 50 years old and which are not of a public character are not to be for publication without the owner's permission.

(2) special authorisation - to be sought from the Oceania Marist Province Archives - is obtained to publish 'entities' such as diaries and whole sets of correspondence.

These conditions do not prevent a researcher from acquiring knowledge of facts of a private nature touching directly on the reputation of people, but the researcher is asked to use his/her discretion in disclosing such information.

History of the Tongan Diocese

The first encounter between missionaries of the Catholic Church and the people of Tonga occurred in October 1837 on the first voyage into the Pacific of Bishop Jean-Baptiste-Francois Pompallier (1801-71), the first Vicar Apostolic of Western Oceania. The bishop led a party of Marists from Valparaiso to the Tongan island of Vava'u where the chief Tāufa'āhau (later King George Tāufa'āhau Tupou I) refused to allow him to land two missionaries. Several days later, the bishop and his party reached Wallis Island where they landed on November 1 and a mission was soon established. A second mission was subsequently set up on neighbouring Futuna. Then the bishop continued via Rotuma and Sydney to New Zealand where he established headquarters for the Vicariate Apostolic of Western Oceania.

Less than five years later, on 2 July 1842, Bishop Pompallier returned to Tonga when he brought more than 30 Tongans, who had been on Wallis Island for some years and who had become Catholics, to the island of Tongatapu. The chief of Pea gave him permission to land two missionaries, Father Joseph Chevron and Brother Attale. This was the beginning of the Catholic Church in Tonga.

In August 1842, the vast area of the Vicariate Apostolic of Western Oceania was trimmed by the creation of a Vicariate Apostolic of Central Oceania, covering Wallis Island, Futuna, Tonga, Samoa, Fiji, New Caledonia and the New Hebrides (now Vanuatu). Pierre Bataillon was appointed the first Vicar Apostolic of this new district. He made Wallis Island the centre of his administration. In the years to follow, the Vicariate of Central Oceania was, in its turn, trimmed several times to more manageable sizes until by 1879 it consisted of Wallis, Futuna and Tonga only. Wallis Island remained the headquarters of the vicariate until Bishop Bataillon died on 11 April 1877. Meanwhile, in 1863, Father Louis Elloy had been appointed his coadjutor with the right of succession. But in 1877, he had also been nominated the first Vicar Apostolic of the Navigators' Islands (Samoa), and he thus became the bishop of two vicariates in 1877. On hearing of Bataillon's death on 11 May that year, he set out immediately to visit Wallis, Futuna and Tonga, and in the following October he left for Europe where he died on 22 November 1878. His successor, appointed in May 1879, was Amand Lamaze, who was named Vicar Apostolic of Central Oceania and Administrator of the Vicariate of Samoa. Lamaze governed the two vicariates from headquarters at Ma'ufanga, Tonga, until Samoa became a separate vicariate in 1896. After Lamaze died on 9 September 1906, Father Armand Olier, his coadjutor since 1903, succeeded him. He, in turn, died on 17 September 1911, and, half a year later, Father Joseph Blanc was entrusted to lead the Vicariate of Central Oceania. This he did until his retirement in 1953.

In 1935, the Vicariate of Central Oceania was again reduced in size by the creation of the Vicariate Apostolic of Wallis and Futuna. As the four island groups within the original Vicariate of Central Oceania had now become separate vicariates, the name of that of Bishop Blanc became the Vicariate Apostolic of the Islands of Tonga in 1937. Two more changes of name occurred during the time of his successor, Bishop John Rodgers (1953-72). The first was in 1957 when the vicariate grew slightly in size by the addition of the island of Niue and was henceforth known as the Vicariate Apostolic of the Islands of Tonga and Niue. The second change came in 1966 when the status of vicariate was abolished and its islands became the Diocese of Tonga. An unusual feature of the diocese was that it was placed directly under the direction of Rome rather than becoming a suffragan of the Archdiocese of Suva. In that same year, the size of the diocese decreased again when Niue was attached to the Diocese of Rarotonga. When Bishop Rodgers resigned in 1972, a Tongan, Father Patelisio Finau, became second bishop of the Diocese of Tonga.

The Archives

The changes of headquarters in the Vicariate of Central Oceania did not favour the conservation of historical documentation. Not much has survived in such disparate locations as Wallis Island and Apia, and much has been lost through tropical conditions and human factors. However, once Ma'ufanga became the permanent centre of the Vicariate of Central Oceania, the possibility of preserving archival material greatly improved. Joseph Blanc, the longest-reigning bishop, was a prolific writer on historical topics among other things, although it appears that once his source material had been used, it no longer occupied his attention. His successor, Bishop Rodgers, was much more records conscious and collected assiduously whatever was to be found in the corners of the Tongan archipelago. He ensured its preservation by building a fire-proof strongroom for the diocesan archives.

Many of the diocesan records were examined and arranged by Fathers Jean Coste (Rome), Kevin Roach (Greenmeadows) and Brian Culling (Tonga) as well as by Dr Hugh Laracy (Auckland). Their work enabled Dr Laracy to publish an article entitled 'Archives of the Catholic Diocese of Tonga' in the Journal of Pacific History, vol. 14 (1979), pp.221-4.

From April to June 1980, Father Cook arranged the archives in five main divisions, A - E, one for each of the five Vicars Apostolic. Each main division was then subdivided in a manner suggested by the nature of the documents themselves, by the work already done by his predecessors, and by the materials in which the records could be stored. A code number, comprising a letter and one or more figures (e.g. E.II. 1 - 4), was used to identify each file. Archival material too large or bulky to be placed in such files was stored in boxes (Box 1 - 15 in this catalogue); and a few even larger items were placed on open shelves (S.I - IV in the catalogue). The catalogue ends with the period of Bishop Blanc. The archives of his successors are not available for research without the permission of the Bishop of Tonga.

This catalogue should enable researchers to find quickly whatever is available to them in the diocesan archives. Most letters have been arranged by author, place of origin and date. To some, the abbreviations n.p. and/or n.d., meaning no place and no date, have been added. Dates following personal names are the years of birth and death; others indicate the period of a specific function. The name Villa Maria which frequently appears is that of the Marist monastery at Hunter's Hill, Sydney, which was the headquarters for the provincial administration of all Marist Fathers in Polynesia and Melanesia until its transfer to Suva in 1971. The term 'Procurator' refers to the business manager/bursar who was charged with looking after the business affairs and needs of the missionaries. The spelling of Tongan names is as it appears in the documents. Researchers should bear in mind that almost all material listed is in French, the mother tongue of the missionaries, unless otherwise specified.

The numbers of the microfilms on which the material in the inventory appears are given at the top of each page or wherever a new microfilm begins. The numbers, e.g. OMPA 1, are invariably followed by the words 'Catholic Diocese of Tonga'. In a few cases, the microfilm numbers do not strictly follow the order of enumeration of the archives themselves.

Associated Records

Five reels of microfilm containing records relating to the Catholic Diocese of Tonga have been made for the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau in the Archivio Padri Maristi, Rome. Copies of the microfilms are available for reference in the libraries named in the first paragraph of this introduction together with information sheets describing their contents. The five reels are numbered PMB 191-195. Details of them in brief are:

INTRODUCTION

This inventory provides a guide to the records of the Catholic diocese of Samoa and Tokelau held at the Diocesan Office, Fetuolemoana, Apia, Western Samoa. The records have been copied on 49 reels of microfilm, under a project of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji. They are numbered OMPA 26 to OMPA 74 inclusive and follow a series of microfilms (OMPA 1 - OMPA 25) of the records of the Catholic diocese of Tonga. The Tongan films are the subject of a separate inventory as are the microfilms that have been made of the archival holdings of other Catholic dioceses and parishes in the Western Pacific. The original negatives of all the films are held by the Oceania Marist Province Archives. Copies of them have been made available to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research through the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau, Research School of Pacific Studies, Australian National University, Canberra. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; and Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla. Sets of all the films have also been deposited in the Archivio Padri Maristi (Marist Fathers Archives), Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy.

The project to microfilm records of Catholic endeavour in the Western Pacific grew out of an earlier plan simply to salvage and classify such records as did exist. The first Marist missionaries in the Pacific had arrived in 1837; they had had a base in Sydney from 1847; and Sydney became the headquarters of their Province of Oceania when this was formed in 1898. The headquarters were moved to Suva in 1971. Meanwhile, in June 1966, the local bishops had become legal owners of the previous vicariates' archives following the extensive ecclesiastical reorganisation of that time. The initiative to salvage and classify those archives came from the Marist Fathers and was wholeheartedly supported by the local bishops through the Conference Episcopale du Pacifique (CEPAC). Funds for the project were provided and the Rev. Dr Theo B. Cook, SM, was appointed to take charge. He began with the diocesan archives in Vila but soon realised that the project's limited aims should be widened to include the compilation of catalogues of the records and the microfilming of them. Three considerations lay behind the idea of microfilming the records: (1) that it preserved and conserved the original documents; (2) that it could make copies available to scholars who could not otherwise have access to them; and (3) that it could bring all diocesan holdings together in the Oceania Marist Province Archives, thus establishing it as a centre for research on the history of the Catholic Church and the Marist Fathers in the South Pacific.

The holdings of the diocesan archives consist largely of: (1) correspondence and reports exchanged between Church leaders in the Pacific and their ecclesiastical or religious superiors elsewhere (in Rome, Lyons, Paris, etc.), most of the documents having been preserved at the receiving end; and (2) correspondence and reports exchanged between missionaries and their bishops within the Pacific, which are usually preserved if directed to a bishop but not when directed to a missionary.

Although the diocesan archives are private collections, their owners, the bishops, agreed to make them and the microfilms of them available for scholarly research provided:

(1) documents more recent than 50 years old and which are not of a public character are not to be published without the owner's permission.

(2) special authorisation - to be sought from the Oceania Marist Province Archives - is obtained to publish 'entities' such as diaries and whole sets of correspondence.

These conditions do not prevent a researcher from acquiring knowledge of facts of a private nature touching directly on the reputation of people, but researchers are asked to use their discretion in disclosing such information.

History of the Diocese

The early history of the Catholic Church in the Western Pacific is outlined briefly in the introduction to the inventory of microfilms for the Catholic diocese of Tonga. The establishment of the diocese of Samoa and Tokelau grew out of the events there described.

One of the earliest documents relating specifically to the Samoa/Tokelau chapter is the last will of a Wallis Island merchant, John Jones, made on Wallis on 28 February 1845. The will (which is preserved in the diocesan archives) bequeathed a schooner to Bishop Bataillon that Jones had under construction. The schooner was completed with the help of French seamen and was named l'Etoile de la mer. She began her maiden voyage on 12 August 1845, carrying three Marist missionaries - Gilbert Roudaire, Louis Violette and Jacques Peloux - to the large Samoan island of Savai'i. They sighted Falealupo on 25 August but the atmosphere there was too unfriendly for them to land. A month later, due to rivalry among local chiefs, they were able to establish a foothold in Lealatele, and early in October, they were welcomed by the chief Mata'afa at Mulinu'u on Upolu thanks to an introductory letter from Lavelua, the king of Wallis.

Both Savai'i and Upolu by this time had been evangelised by emissaries of the London Missionary Society and Methodist missionaries. The arrival of competitors to them aroused much anti-Catholic propaganda. This, however, was the only serious obstacle the Marist missionaries were to face. But the days of mass conversion were over, and the Catholic Church in Samoa under the patronage of Mata'afa became politically classified within the intricate web of local societal relations and alliances. This was bound to close other avenues to increased membership.

By 1880, there were 12 parishes on Savai'i, Manono, Upolu and Tutuila with about 4,700 Catholics out of a population of 40,000, or roughly 11.7 per cent. A century later the number of parishes had increased to 21, and the Catholics to about 35,000, or approximately 18.9 per cent of the estimated population of both Western and American Samoa of 185,000.

Except for the years 1870-77, Wallis Island, under Bishop Bataillon, was the administrative centre for the Catholic Church in Samoa. The first vicar apostolic of Samoa was Louis Elloy, who became auxiliary to Bishop Bataillon in 1863 with right of succession, and was installed in his Samoan post in 1870 with residence in Apia. The period of his episcopacy was one of progress and influence. However, when Bataillon died in 1877, Elloy had to assume the leadership of the Catholic missions in both the Wallis and Tonga groups, and in May of that year he set out to visit them. A year later while in France to discuss administrative matters, he died, leaving the three island groups in Polynesia without a bishop. Amand Lamaze, of Tonga, was named to succeed him as vicar apostolic of Tonga and Wallis and Administrator of Samoa in 1879. His administratorship was intended to be a temporary one, but, in fact, it lasted until 1896. Although Lamaze paid occasional visits to Samoa, he resided at Maofanga, Tonga, and was represented in Apia by a pro-vicar. Thus, the Catholic church in Samoa still lacked the hierarchical lustre which in Samoan society would have been significant. Finally, there was a change when, in 1896, Pierre Broyer, a well-known figure in the Apia and Aleipata areas, was nominated the second vicar apostolic of Samoa (then called the Navigators' Islands). In 1906 Bishop Broyer moved his residence from Apia to Moamoa and this became the grandiose centre of the church's activities. Moamoa remained the residence of Broyer's successors, namely Joseph Darnand, 1920-53, and John Dieter, 1954-55.

When George Pearce became the fifth vicar apostolic in 1956, the title of the vicariate was changed from Navigators' Islands to Samoa and Tokelau; and in 1966, it became the diocese of Apia when the Catholic missions of Oceania were elevated to the status of archdioceses and suffragan dioceses. Bishop Pearce was transferred to the Archdiocese of Suva in 1967. His successor, a Samoan, Pio Taofinu'u, was born in 1923, ordained a priest in 1954, and professed in the Society of Mary in 1962. He was ordained a bishop at Moamoa on 29 May 1968 and created a cardinal by Pope Paul VI in 1973. His residence is in Apia.

The Archives

Of all the Catholic archives in Central Polynesia, the diocesan office for the diocese of Samoa and Tokelau holds the biggest collection of records. Despite a series of shifts from Apia to Moamoa to Vaea and back to Apia, they have survived fairly well. From May to the end of November 1981, Father Cook collected documents that were stored in various places in and around Apia as well as in the presbyteries of Lepua and Leone on Tutuila, American Samoa. The documents were classified according to the periods of the five leaders of the Church in Samoa from Bishop Bataillon in 1842. A capital letter - A,B,C, D, E - was the principal symbol to identify the records of each period; and, as will be seen in this inventory, they were sub-classified by the use of Arabic numerals. Thus, the code A.1.12 immediately identifies a file as belonging to the period of Bishop Bataillon while E.23.3 does likewise for the episcopacy of Bishop Darnand. The archives of the next bishops - Dieter and Pearce - have been collected and stored, but they are not covered by this inventory.

Much time was given to the recombination and transcription of many documents that had disintegrated. Once recomposed, they were placed in special covers with typewritten transcriptions. Most of the records are in French, the mother tongue of most of the mission's personnel, although writers of other languages often used French too. Many documents of the period of the German administration in Western Samoa, namely 1900-14, and earlier, are written in the Gothic handwriting of those days. To assist researchers, typewritten transcriptions into modern German have been added to these documents. In some cases where it seemed useful, English, Samoan, German or French documents in this catalogue are indicated by the letters E, S, G and F respectively. Dates following a person's name indicate his life span; others indicate the period of a specific office. Names of ships are placed between inverted commas. The frequently mentioned name Villa Maria is the Marist monastery at Hunters Hill, Sydney, headquarters of the provincial administration of Oceania until its transfer to Suva in 1971. The name Procurator refers to the business manager/bursar who looked after the business affairs and other needs of the missionaries. The parish priests of Lepua on Tutuila have been given the same title in this inventory because they often acted as such and were, in fact, the bishop's unofficial liaison with the government of that island, mostly in matters of school education. Under section E is a special sub-section, E.23, arranged for Tutuila. The reason for this is that after 1900 Western Samoa and American Samoa moved away from each other politically and economically, and this is reflected in the archives especially from 1918 onwards.

The numbers of the microfilms on which the material in the inventory appears are given at the top of each page or wherever a new microfilm begins. The numbers, e.g. OMPA 32, are followed on their first appearance by the words 'Catholic Diocese of Samoa and Tokelau.' In a few cases, the microfilm numbers do not strictly follow the order of enumeration of the archives themselves.

Researchers should note that some non-archival documents, which are not listed in the inventory, appear at the end of eight reels of microfilm in this series and that reel OMPA 74 is entirely devoted to such material. The material on those reels is as follows:

Associated Records

Two serials and a number of other records of importance to historians of the diocese are held in the diocesan office in Apia but have not been microfilmed. They are:

- * O le 'Au 'Auna: Niusipepa o le Lotu Katoliko (The Servant: Newspaper of the Catholic Church), a monthly magazine printed by the Catholic Mission Press from 1 January 1900 to December 1968. The set is complete. For a description, see P.O'Reilly and J. Allais, Bibliographie des Publications de la Mission Mariste des Iles Samoa, 1862-1976, Paris and Tahiti, 1977, p. 23.
- * Tautai (The Helmsman), a monthly diocesan newspaper and successor to the 'Au 'Auna. It began on 1 January 1969, ceased publication in December 1970 and continued as volume III in January 1976. It is still being published. The files for volume I (1969) and II (1970) are incomplete in the diocesan archives, but the Nelson Memorial Library, Apia, has complete sets. For further description, see O'Reilly and Allais 1977, p. 47.
- * An incomplete collection of printed and stencilled publications of the Catholic Mission of Samoa. O'Reilly and Allais 1977 give an almost complete list of the publications.

- * A collection of Pacific books which previously belonged to the library of the Catholic Club in Apia, an initiative of Father Joseph Deihl, SM.
- * A large collection of largely unidentified photographs.

Seven reels of microfilm containing records relating to the Catholic diocese of Samoa and Tokelau have been made for the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau in the Archivio Padri Maristi, Rome. Copies of the microfilms are available for reference in the libraries named in the first paragraph of this introduction together with information sheets describing their contents. The seven reels are numbered PMB 184-190. Details of them in brief are:

INTRODUCTION

The records described in this inventory comprise a portion of the archives of the Marist order of the Catholic Church. They cover the period from the departure of the first Marist missionaries for the Pacific Islands in 1836 to the establishment of Oceania as a separate province of the Society of Mary in 1898. Until 1971, the records were preserved at Villa Maria, headquarters of the Marist order in Australia. They are now housed in the Archives of the Marist Fathers (Archivio Padri Maristi) in Rome.

The inventory continues a series produced by the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau of the microfilmed records of Marist missions in the Pacific Islands. The microfilming of the records was carried out in a project of the Oceania Marist Province Archives (OMPA), Suva, Fiji, under the direction of Father Theo B. Cook, SM. The original negatives of the microfilms are held by the Oceania Marist Province Archives. Copies of them have been made available through the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; and Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla. Sets of all the films have also been deposited in the Archivio Padri Maristi, Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy.

An outline of the OMPA microfilming project has been given in the introductions to the earlier inventories in this series, namely for those of the Catholic dioceses of Tonga (microfilms OMPA 1 - 25) and Samoa and Tokelau (OMPA 26 - 74). The 21 reels of microfilm covered by this inventory (OMPA 80 - 100) immediately follow the series for the diocese of Samoa and Tokelau as reel numbers OMPA 75 - 79 were not used. Later inventories will cover the diocese of Wallis and Futuna, the diocese of Port Vila (Vanuatu), and the archbishopric of Noumea (New Caledonia).

The early history of Marist missions in the Pacific is summarised in the introduction to the inventory of microfilms for the diocese of Tonga. Up to World War II, most of the missionaries were of French origin. They lived and worked under twofold direction - that of their bishop and, until 1898, of their general superior in France. From 1898, when Oceania was made a separate province within the Society of Mary, a Provincial assumed direct responsibility for the missionaries. All of the missionaries were expected to maintain a regular correspondence with their authorities. As a result, many of their letters are still to be found in the various diocesan archives in the Pacific as well as in the archives of their order in Rome.

A description of the Rome archives by Hugh Laracy will be found in the Journal of Pacific History, vol. 3 (1968), pp. 165-71. In this, the author states that eight reels of microfilm of Marist letters relating mainly to Fiji but also to the Solomon Islands and Rotuma for the period 1840-1915 are held by the National Library of Australia in Canberra. Since then, 35 reels of microfilm from the same archives have been produced for the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau. Brief details of these are given later in this introduction.

The material covered by this inventory mainly comprises correspondence, reports, etc. addressed to the general administration of the Marist order which was based in or around Lyons, France, until its transfer to Rome in 1925. This material fills reels OMPA 80 - 95 and part of OMPA 96. It consists of letters from and diaries kept by missionaries on their way to Oceania; letters and reports from Visitators in Oceania; and letters and reports from the Procurators. (The nature of the duties of the Visitators and Procurators is explained below). The remaining material occupies the rest of reel OMPA 96 and OMPA 97 - 100. It consists of letters to the Procure, i.e. the headquarters of the Procurator, in Sydney.

The Procure was established in Sydney in 1845 to provide for the material needs of the missionaries in their scattered islands in the Pacific. From 1847, the Procure house was situated on a property on Tarban Creek at Hunters Hill. The house, named Villa Maria, was the residence and headquarters of the Procurator from that time as well as of the Visitator from 1857. The Procurator was a priest charged with buying provisions for the missionaries and shipping them to the islands, providing accommodation for sick and travelling missionaries, and generally looking after business matters. The Procurator maintained a frequent correspondence with his superior in France as well as with the missionaries in the islands - including New Zealand until 1899.

The first Visitator was sent from France in 1857. His duties were to attend to the spiritual and fraternal needs of the missionaries. Although Villa Maria was his base, his main obligation was to maintain contact with the missionaries. Hence, he travelled widely and regularly and his reports to his superior in France are usually highly informative.

The office of the Procurator was transferred from Villa Maria to the centre of Sydney in 1894, but Villa Maria remained the home of the Visitator and other Marists. When the Province of Oceania was formed in 1898, Villa Maria became the administrative centre of the Provincial. In 1942, the Procure returned to Villa Maria and the archives of both the Procure and the Visitators/Provincials remained there until 1971 when the provincial administration was transferred to Suva. It was then decided that the records up to 1898 should be transferred to the Archivio Padri Maristi in Rome where they were kept intact and given the name Fonds Villa Maria. In using the microfilm copies of these records, researchers should bear in mind that their original addressee lived in Sydney not in France.

The post-1898 archival material from Villa Maria was shipped to Suva in 1971 and forms the basis of the Oceania Marist Province Archives.

This and the following pages provide a guide to the records of the Catholic diocese of Wallis and Futuna held in the Bishop's office at Lano, Wallis Island. The records have been copied on 26 reels of microfilm numbered OMPA 101 - OMPA 126. The copying of them was part of a project organised by the Rev. Dr Theo B. Cook, SM, of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji. Earlier records microfilmed under the same project include those of the diocese of Tonga (reels OMPA 1 - OMPA 25) and the diocese of Samoa and Tokelau (reels OMPA 26 - OMPA 74). Separate inventories have been prepared for those films. The original negatives of all the films are held by the Oceania Marist Province Archives. Copies of them have been made available to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research through the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau, Research School of Pacific Studies, Australian National University, Canberra. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; and Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla. Sets of all the films have also been deposited in the Archivio Padri Maristi (Marist Fathers Archives), Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy.

The project to microfilm records of Catholic endeavour in the Western Pacific grew out of an earlier plan simply to salvage and classify such records as did exist. The first Marist missionaries in the Pacific had arrived in 1837; they had had a base in Sydney from 1847; and Sydney became the headquarters of their Province of Oceania when this was formed in 1898. The headquarters were moved to Suva in 1971. Meanwhile, in June 1966, the local bishops had become legal owners of the previous vicariates' archives following the extensive ecclesiastical reorganisation of that time. The initiative to salvage and classify those archives came from the Marist Fathers and was wholeheartedly supported by the local bishops through the Conference Episcopale du Pacifique (CEPAC). Funds for the project were provided and Father Cook was appointed to take charge. He began with the diocesan archives in Vila but soon realised that the project's limited aims should be widened to include the compilation of catalogues of the records and the microfilming of them. Three considerations lay behind the idea of microfilming the records: (1) that it preserved and conserved the original documents; (2) that it could make copies available to scholars who could not otherwise have access to them; and (3) that it could bring all diocesan holdings together in the Oceania Marist Province Archives, thus establishing it as a centre for research on the history of the Catholic Church and the Marist Fathers in the South Pacific.

The holdings of the diocesan archives consist largely of: (1) correspondence and reports exchanged between Church leaders in the Pacific and their ecclesiastical or religious superiors elsewhere (in Rome, Lyons, Paris, etc.), most of the documents having been preserved at the receiving end; and (2) correspondence and reports exchanged between missionaries and their bishops within the Pacific, which are usually preserved if directed to a bishop but not when directed to a missionary.

Although the diocesan archives are private collections, their owners, the bishops, agreed to make them and the microfilms of them available for scholarly research provided:

(1) documents more recent than 50 years old and which are not of a public character are not to be published without the owner's permission.

(2) special authorisation - to be sought from the Oceania Marist Province Archives - is obtained to publish 'entities' such as diaries and whole sets of correspondence.

These conditions do not prevent a researcher from acquiring knowledge of facts of a private nature touching directly on the reputation of people, but researchers are asked to use their discretion in disclosing such information.

History of the Diocese

The first Catholic missionaries to Wallis and Futuna left France in December 1836 under Bishop Jean-Baptiste-Francois Pompallier who had been appointed the first Vicar Apostolic of Western Oceania. The party entered the Pacific by the South American route and sailed from Valparaiso on 10 August 1837 with Pona pe in Micronesia as their ultimate goal. After calling at Mangareva and Tahiti, the missionaries put into Vava'u in Tonga where Pompallier sought permission to land two members of his party. After this request was refused, the party sailed northward to Wallis Island where the bishop was able to establish Father Pierre Bataillon and Brother Joseph-Xavier Luzy on shore. The bishop's next plan was to call at the island of Rotuma. However, a number of islanders from Futuna, some 200 km. southwest, were on Wallis Island at the time and they asked to be taken home. The bishop agreed to this and as he found conditions on their island seemingly favourable to his enterprise, he decided to leave Father Pierre Chanel there with Brother Marie Nizier Delorne as his assistant. Pompallier then sailed to Sydney and eventually to New Zealand where the headquarters of his vicariate were established.

There was some resistance to the missionaries on Wallis and Futuna during their first few years. This culminated in 1841 in the murder of Father Chanel, who has since been canonised. However, by 1842, all islanders on both Wallis and Futuna had been converted. Wallis was then divided into three parishes: Mua, Matautu (sometimes called Hahake) and Hihifo (or Vaitupu); and Futuna was divided into two: Sigave (or Sausau) and Alo (or Kolopelu). From then on, French Catholicism was blended with the traditional Polynesian life style of the two islands to create a theocracy which became the envy of Catholic missionaries on neighbouring islands.

The immense vicariate of Western Oceania entrusted to Bishop Pompallier soon proved to be far too large to be practicable, and in 1842 part of this was carved off to form the vicariate of Central Oceania. The new vicariate comprised the islands of Wallis, Futuna, New Caledonia, the New Hebrides, Tonga, Samoa, Fiji, Rotuma, Niue and the Gilbert Islands. Father Bataillon was appointed Bishop of Enos ('Enosi' in Wallisian parlance) and first Vicar Apostolic of the new vicariate. As time went on, Central Oceania was also found to be too large and was gradually cut up into other vicariates - New Caledonia and the New Hebrides in 1847, Fiji and Rotuma in 1869, and Samoa in 1870. When Bataillon died in 1877, the vicariate of Central Oceania consisted only of Wallis, Futuna and the Tonga Islands. From April 1877 to April 1878, the vicariate was under the authority of Bishop Louis Elloy, who had been coadjutor to Bishop Bataillon since 1863 with residence in Samoa. After Elloy died during a visit to Europe, Bishop Amand Lamaze took charge from his headquarters at Ma'ufanga on Tongatapu. This remained the centre of administration of the vicariate under Lamaze's successors - Bishop Armand Olier (1906-1911) and Bishop Joseph Felix Blanc (1912-1935). However the link between Tonga and Wallis/Futuna was always difficult to maintain because of poor inter-island communications, and in 1935 the Vicariate Apostolic of Wallis and Futuna was created. Bishop Alexandre Poncet became the first Vicar Apostolic. Under his successor, Bishop Michel Darmancier (1962-1974), the vicariate became the diocese of Wallis and Futuna. Since 1974, the diocese has been administered by a Wallisian-born bishop, Lolesio Fuahea, with headquarters in the ancient educational centre of Lano. The archives for the diocese are located at Lano.

The Archives

Although Wallis Island has been called the 'Cradle of Catholicism in Western Oceania', few documents concerning the infancy of the faith on that island have been preserved on the island itself apart from baptismal, marriage and burial registers. The registers are fairly complete from the earliest days.

The paucity of documents until about 1900 (Division A in this inventory) is largely due to the smallness of Wallis Island and its neighbour, Futuna. Generally speaking, this made it unnecessary for the bishop and his missionaries to write to each other: they could communicate in person. On the other hand, the Marist and Vatican archives in Rome do hold letters that Bataillon and others wrote to their superiors, relatives and friends. There are also some diaries of the early days as well as reports and financial statements.

For the period from 1900 to 1936 (Division B) when there was no bishop in residence on Wallis and when the Vicar Apostolic for Central Oceania resided in Tonga, some of the documentation for Wallis and Futuna is to be found in the archives of the diocese of Tonga (microfilms OMPA 1 - 26).

The third section of the Lano archives - Division C - comprises the papers of Father Joseph Henquel, SM, an outstanding missionary who worked in Samoa from 1879 to 1896 and then on Wallis until his death in 1924. While in Samoa, Henquel made the study of the flora, fauna and language of those islands his principal hobbies. But after he moved to Wallis, his interests shifted to local history, especially genealogy. In this field, he produced a remarkable opus - a genealogical record of all Wallisian families. Henquel gathered his information from oral tradition, from the baptismal and marriage records of the parishes (which occasionally contain notes in his handwriting), and from regular parish censuses which he probably organised and conducted himself. Henquel's genealogies now constitute a most valuable and authoritative source when problems arise concerning the ownership or division of lands.

Division D in the archives is made up of the papers of Bishop Poncet, who became the first Vicar Apostolic of Wallis and Futuna in 1935. He remained in the post until he resigned in 1960, but he continued for a further year as administrator. His papers fill more than 20 reels of microfilm.

It should be noted that each code number in the inventory - e.g. D.VIII.a - refers to a folder or box containing all documents described in the subsequent specifications. The frequently-used name Villa Maria is that of the Marist monastery at Hunters Hill, Sydney, which was the headquarters for the administration of the Marist order in the Pacific until its transfer to Suva in 1971. Dates following the name of a person indicate the years of his birth and death; other dates indicate the period of his specific function. All material listed in the inventory is in French, the mother tongue of the missionaries on Wallis and Futuna, unless otherwise specified or unless the author was locally born.

Associated Records

Besides the microfilmed material from the Lano archives listed in this inventory, researchers should note that 13 reels of microfilmed records from those archives have been made for the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau. The reels are numbered PMB 960 - 966 and PMB 972 - 974. Details of them in brief are:

INTRODUCTION

The archival material covered by this inventory encompasses the period from the beginning of the Marist mission in Vanuatu (formerly the New Hebrides) in 1887 down to the death in 1939 of Bishop Victor Douceré, first Vicar Apostolic of the New Hebrides. The material has been copied on 53 reels of microfilm numbered OMPA 127 - 178* under a project of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji, directed by Father Theo B. Cook, SM. Earlier records microfilmed under the same project and which are the subject of separate inventories are those of the Catholic diocese of Tonga (microfilms OMPA 1 - 25), the diocese of Samoa and Tokelau (OMPA 26 - 74), the diocese of Wallis and Futuna (OMPA 101 - 126) and the 'Fonds Villa Maria' (OMPA 80 - 100) preserved in the Archivio Padri Maristi (Marist Fathers' Archives, Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy). Copies of the microfilms have been made available through the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla; and Library, University of Papua New Guinea, Boroko. Sets of all the films have also been deposited in the Archivio Padri Maristi.

The holdings of the diocesan archives consist largely of: (1) correspondence and reports exchanged between Church leaders in the Pacific and their ecclesiastical or religious superiors elsewhere (in Rome, Lyons, Paris, etc.), most of the documents having been preserved at the receiving end; and (2) correspondence and reports exchanged between missionaries and their bishops within the Pacific, which are usually preserved if directed to a bishop but not when directed to a missionary.

Although the diocesan archives are private collections, their owners, the bishops, agreed to make them and the microfilms of them available for scholarly research provided:

(1) documents of a date more recent than 50 years old and which are not of a public character are not to be published without the owner's permission. (This restriction also applies to parts of OMPA 165 - see p. 51 - and OMPA 178 - see p. 5).

(2) special authorisation - to be sought from the Oceania Marist Province Archives - is obtained to publish 'entities' such as diaries and whole sets of correspondence.

These conditions do not prevent a researcher from acquiring knowledge of facts of a private nature touching directly on the reputation of people, but the researcher is asked to use his/her discretion in disclosing such information.

History of the Diocese

When Pope Pius IX created the Vicariate Apostolic of New Caledonia on 27 June 1847 and entrusted it to Bishop Guillaume Douarre, it apparently included the archipelago of Vanuatu. The archipelago had been mentioned in proposals by Jean Claude Colin, the general superior of the Marists, to subdivide the over-size vicariate of Central Oceania of Bishop Pierre Bataillon. But the official act of creation of Bishop Douarre's new vicariate merely referred to 'the vast island of New Caledonia and its region.' However, Douarre and his successors interpreted the term 'region' to include Vanuatu, and on various occasions they expressed concern and regret at not being able to extend their pastoral care to its islands.

The first Marist missionaries to set foot in Vanuatu had actually been sent to New Caledonia but were forced to seek refuge on the southern island of Aneityum. That was in 1847. They remained on Aneityum until 1850 when an opportunity arose for them to go to the Isle of Pines. Thirty-seven years later, Bishop Hilarion Fraysse of New Caledonia sent a second party of Marists to Vanuatu in response to requests from French settlers there and from the French Government for the Catholic Church to establish a presence in the group. The principal spokesman for the French settlers was the celebrated entrepreneur John Higginson. The missionaries were headed by Father Jean Pionnier, pro-vicar of Bishop Fraysse. They comprised Fathers Charles Leforestier, Francois Gautret, Xavier Gaudet and a dozen Catholic New Caledonians. After landing at Mele on Efate on 21 January 1887, Gaudet moved north to Banam Bay on Malekula and Gautret to Port Olry on Espiritu Santo. When Pionnier returned to Noumea in March of that year, Leforestier became superior of the mission. Victor Douceré took over this function in September 1889 and remained in charge until sickness forced him to return to Noumea in 1893. Pionnier was then reappointed to head the mission and he established himself at Port Sandwich (Lamap), Malekula. From this base he explored and expanded his activities to neighbouring Ambrym until being recalled to Noumea in 1899. Douceré then resumed charge of the mission. He had made a visitation to the group on behalf of Bishop Fraysse in May and June of the previous year. In the course of this he had met Father Emmanuel Rougier, a Marist missionary from Fiji, who had come to the group to supervise the repatriation and resettlement on Pentecost of a substantial number of islanders who had been converted to Catholicism while working as contract labourers in Fiji. Through these islanders the Catholic Church got a good start at four centres on Pentecost, namely Wanour, Melsisi, Namaram and Loltong. It was from Wanour a few years later that a new mission station was established at Baie Barrier on Pentecost, while Melsisi was the starting point for a mission to Aoba.

By 1900, the missionaries had established promising footholds on all of the main islands from Efate north to the Banks group. Their success was due to three factors: the return of converted islanders to Fiji and the spread of their influence on Pentecost and, to a lesser extent, on Ambrym; the development of local married catechists and their involvement in village churches and schools; and the creation of Vanuatu as a prefecture apostolic which brought stability of personnel and the pursuance of common goals.

Bishop Fraysse paved the way for the elevation of Vanuatu to the status of a prefecture apostolic during a visit to Rome in 1900. Douceré, who was in Noumea, was appointed the first vicar apostolic. He left for Vila in November of that year, and the prefecture apostolic officially came into being on 9 February 1901. Meanwhile, the number of converts was increasing and on 23 March 1904, the prefecture apostolic became a vicariate apostolic.

This meant that the head of the missionary district received episcopal ordination, which increased his rights and faculties both within and outside his district. As no 'episcopal see' was available within his own district, he was given a titular one and so became titular bishop of Terenuthis, a title he frequently used thereafterwards in signing letters.

Bishop Douceré died in Vila on 12 May 1939. He was succeeded by Julius Halbert of New Caledonia who governed the vicariate as titular bishop of Archelais until resigning on 11 March 1954. His successor, Louis Julliard, was appointed on 1 January 1955 and became the first bishop of Port Vila in 1966 when Vanuatu, like all other vicariates apostolic in the South Pacific, was elevated to the status of a diocese. After Bishop Julliard resigned on 31 December 1976, Francis Lambert became the bishop of Port Vila.

From the beginning, the personnel of the mission to Vanuatu consisted of priests and brothers of the Society of Mary. They were joined in 1898 by Sisters of the Third Order Regular of Mary (TORM), who were called Missionary Sisters of the Society of Mary (SMSM) after 1931; and by Marist Brothers of the Schools (FMS) from 1904 to 1913. For some years the missionary priests had New Caledonian catechists as their assistants, but the training of Ni-Vanuatu catechists began at Mele in 1900 and at Montmartre, Efate, in 1902. Montmartre remained the catechists' school until quite recent years. The first missionary sisters were assisted by some Filles de Marie, the indigenous sisterhood of New Caledonia. Over the years Ni-Vanuatu women have also become members of this religious congregation. The first Ni-Vanuatu priest, Cyriaque Adeng, was ordained in 1955.

The Archives

When a hurricane struck Vila in 1959, it lifted the old house of the bishop into the air and exposed the archives to several days of torrential rain. The papers that could be saved were collected in boxes and placed in a barn. They were returned to temporary storage in the bishop's newly-built house in 1965, and were accommodated in a strong-room there from 1982. Despite the vicissitudes the surviving papers have undergone, and although there are some gaps in them, the archives of the diocese of Port Vila represent a rich historical source. There are more than 6,700 letters addressed to Bishop Douceré besides diaries and linguistic studies. Most of the letters have been arranged according to author, place of origin, and date. This combination generally indicates the whereabouts of an author within the diocese at the time of writing. Where a letter was written on shipboard, the name of the ship is given between inverted commas. Dates following a name are those of the person's birth and death; other dates indicate the period of his/her specific function. Researchers should bear in mind that Lyons, France, was the headquarters of the Marist Fathers' general administration until 1924 when they were transferred to Rome. Villa Maria is the name of the Marist monastery at Hunters Hill, Sydney, which was headquarters of the provincial administration of the order until transferred to Suva in 1971. For many years Villa Maria was also the residence of the procurator, i.e. the business manager for the missionaries in the Pacific. There was also a procurator in Lyons as well as in the main centre of the vicariate. The records of the Port Vila procurators have largely disappeared. There is also little on record concerning the Catholic schools and education because, until the 1960s, there was no education office in the diocese and each school handled its daily affairs within the framework of general Catholic principles.

Researchers should note that some documents, which are not listed in the inventory, appear at the end of OMPA 130 and at the beginning of OMPA 164, and that OMPA 163 and 178 are entirely devoted to such material. The material on those reels is as follows:

Associated Records

In 1969, during a microfilming expedition to Vanuatu, the executive officer of the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau obtained eight reels of microfilm of the records of the Catholic diocese of Port Vila. The records were made available for microfilming by the then bishop, Mgr Juillard. His method was to produce boxes of documents piecemeal from an inner sanctum so that it was impossible to know how they fitted into the totality of the archives or what proportion they represented. The contents of the eight reels of microfilm are listed below. All or most of the material copied will be found in the inventory in the following pages, which means that that material is available in two separate series of microfilms.

I N T R O D U C T I O N

The records described in this catalogue are those of the Archdiocese of Noumea, formerly the Vicariate Apostolic of New Caledonia. The records have been copied on 182 reels of microfilm under a project carried out by Rev. Dr. Theo B. Cook, SM, of the Oceania Marist Province Archives, Suva, Fiji. The reels are numbered OMPA 179 - OMPA 360. Earlier reels in the same series contain copies of the records of the Diocese of Tonga (OMPA 1 - OMPA 25), Diocese of Samoa and Tokelau (OMPA 26 - OMPA 74), Marist Fathers, Rome (OMPA 80 - OMPA 100) and Diocese of Port Vila (OMPA 127 - 178) for which separate inventories have been prepared. Film numbers OMPA 75 - OMPA 79 were not used. The original microfilms are held in the Oceania Marist Province Archives in Suva. Copies of them have been made available to the Archivio Padri Maristi (Marist Fathers Archives), Via Alessandro Poerio 63, 00152 Rome, Italy, and to several libraries around the world specialising in Pacific research. Those libraries are: the National Library of Australia, Canberra; Mitchell Library, Sydney; State Library of Victoria, Melbourne; Library, Australian National University, Canberra; Alexander Turnbull Library, Wellington, New Zealand; Library, University of Hawaii at Manoa, Honolulu; Library, University of California, San Diego, at La Jolla; and Library, University of Papua New Guinea, Boroko.

The project to microfilm the records of Catholic endeavour in the Western Pacific grew out of an earlier plan simply to salvage and classify them. The first Marist missionaries in the Pacific had arrived in 1837; they had had a base in Sydney from 1847; and Sydney had been the headquarters of their Province of Oceania from its formation in 1898 until being moved to Suva in 1971. Meanwhile, in June 1966, the local bishops - or archbishop in the case of New Caledonia - had become legal owners of the previous vicariates' archives following the extensive ecclesiastical reorganisation of that time. The initiative to salvage and classify those archives came from the Marist Fathers and was wholeheartedly supported by the local bishops through the Conference Episcopale du Pacifique (CEPAC). Funds for the project were provided and Father Cook was appointed to take charge of it. He began with the diocesan archives in Vila but soon realised that the project's limited aims should be widened to include the compilation of catalogues of the records and the microfilming of them. Three considerations lay behind the idea of microfilming the records: (1) that it preserved and conserved the original documents; (2) that it could make copies available to scholars who could not otherwise have access to them; and (3) that it could bring all diocesan holdings together in the Oceania Marist Province Archives, thus establishing it as a centre for research on the history of the Catholic Church and the Marist Fathers in the South Pacific.

The holdings of the various archives consist largely of: (1) correspondence and reports exchanged between Church leaders in the Pacific and their ecclesiastical or religious superiors elsewhere (in Rome, Lyons, Paris, etc.), most of the documents having been preserved at the receiving end; and (2) correspondence and reports exchanged between missionaries and their bishops within the Pacific, which are usually preserved if directed to a bishop but not when directed to a missionary.

Although the diocesan archives are private collections, their owners agreed to make them and the microfilms of them available for scholarly research provided:

(1) documents of a date more recent than 50 years old and which are not of a public character are not to be for publication without the owner's permission.

(2) special authorisation - to be sought from the Oceania Marist Province Archives - is obtained to publish 'entities' such as diaries and whole sets of correspondence.

These conditions do not prevent a researcher from acquiring knowledge of facts of a private nature touching directly on the reputation of people, but the researcher is asked to use his/her discretion in disclosing such information.

The Mission

The first Catholic missionaries to New Caledonia disembarked at Balade on 21 December 1843 under the direction of Guillaume Douarre. They were envoys of Bishop Pierre Bataillon, of Wallis Island, head of an enormously large missionary district that comprised all the islands from New Caledonia to the Cook Islands. This huge district was reduced in 1847 by making New Caledonia a separate vicariate apostolic. The vicariate was entrusted to the Marist order which thereafter provided the vicariate's chief and took responsibility for developing and running the mission. Each apostolic vicar was ordained a bishop with the title of an ancient, but vacant, episcopal see. Seven men served as heads of the vicariate before all vicariates in the South Pacific were made dioceses and archdioceses in 1966. They were:

1. Guillaume Douarre (1810-53), Bishop of Amata and coadjutor of Bishop Bataillon, 1842-47, and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1847-53.
2. Pierre Rougeryon (1817-1902), Pro-vicar of New Caledonia, 1853-73. (He was not ordained a bishop).
3. Ferdinand Vitte (1824-93), Bishop of Anastasiopolis and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1873-80.
4. Hilarion Fraysse (1842-1905), Bishop of Abila and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1880-1905.
5. Claude-Marie Chanrion (1865-1941), Bishop of Cariopolis and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1905-37.
6. Edouard Bresson (1884-1967), Bishop of Cestrus and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1937-56.
7. Pierre Martin (1910- ), Bishop of Selinonte and Vicar Apostolic of New Caledonia, 1956-66. (He was archbishop to December 1970.)

Following the administrative reorganisation of 1966, the vicariate of New Caledonia ceased to be a mission and became an independent organisation within the Catholic Church under the title of Archdiocese of Noumea. The titles of bishop and vicar apostolic were abrogated. Bishop Martin became the first archbishop. The responsibility for ecclesiastical affairs was removed from the Marist Fathers and entrusted to the archbishop, thus bringing more than 120 years of Marist involvement in the country to an end.

Besides the Marist priests who had arrived with Father Douarre in 1843, the personnel of the vicariate had always included Marist Brothers coadjutors. They were followed in 1855 by Sisters of the Third Order Regular (TORM), whose name was changed to missionary sisters of the Society of Mary (SMSM) in 1922. Sisters of St. Joseph de Cluny joined the mission in 1870, followed by Marist Brothers of the Schools in 1873 and Trappist Fathers in 1876. On the local side, the missionaries were slowly reinforced by the Soeurs Filles de Marie, founded in 1875. More than half a century later, in 1930, the Freres Auxiliaires de St Joseph were established. The first indigenous priests were ordained in 1946. But almost from the beginning, the missionaries sought the aid of local catechists. However, the history of catechists in New Caledonia - centred on the station of St. Louis near Noumea - was always an unsettled one, causing much discussion over their remuneration, position within the framework of Christianity, etc.

Missionary activity centred on the Grande Terre (i.e. main island of New Caledonia), Loyalty Islands, Isle of Pines and the Belep archipelago. As the Act of Erection of 13 July 1847 proclaimed by the Vatican referred only to 'the great island of New Caledonia and its region', it was not clear to the first heads of mission whether the New Hebrides (now Vanuatu) were included within the boundaries of the vicariate or not. In any case, although they felt responsible for that archipelago, it was not until December 1875 that Bishop Vitte broached the idea with the Vatican of opening a mission there. He said: 'At great expense I have been able to obtain nine natives of those islands and I have placed them in our school of St. Louis ... My plan, some day, is to make them the harbingers of missionaries in their country.'

Bishop Vitte's plan was never carried out. But in 1887, his successor, Bishop Fraysse, did inaugurate a mission there under pressure from the French Government and with its aid. It remained under his jurisdiction until officially separated in 1901. Since then the extent of the vicariate of New Caledonia (now the archdiocese of Noumea) has remained unaltered. It comprises the Grande Terre and the islands immediately to the north, south and east.

The history of the mission in general has been characterised by two main features:

- (a) the conversion of the Melanesian population, which diminished in the nineteenth century and increased in the twentieth - a population fundamentally religious.

- (b) the indifferent if not antagonistic attitude of the non-Melanesian population which increased rapidly after the convict period ended and systematic colonisation began. This population is overwhelmingly non-religious.

The cultural and psychological distance between the two populations with its sometimes striking political and religious consequences in social and ordinary life was always a difficult problem for the heads of the mission who felt responsible for all who were baptised Catholics. Pastoral work among the two groups, and the highs and lows in religious effectiveness were strongly influenced by political and religious events in France. The task of gathering such diverse sheep into a single fold made the history of missionary activity in New Caledonia quite distinct from that of other vicariates in the South Pacific. This is constantly evident in the archives of the vicariate.

The Archives

In 1881, Father Xavier Montrouzier, then a member of the mission in Noumea, described in a letter to his brother Gabriel, a priest in France, how disputes involving a former military governor, Charles Guillain, had made all the missionaries extremely records-conscious. The disputes had occurred during Father Rougeryron's time as pro-vicar. Until then, Rougeryron had preserved only a few government and church papers of the most formal kind. But the disputes with Guillain, which might have taken a different course if full records had been kept, changed all that. From Noumea to the Isle of Pines, from Balade to Lifou, and from Ile Nou to Conception, all the missionaries began to preserve letters, notes and copies of official acts emanating from the government and the colonial administration. They began to make duplicate copies of those acts which they collected in great tomes. They kept the correspondence with the ecclesiastical administration and with Guillain and successive governors. This was the genesis of the rich archives of the Catholic Church in New Caledonia - an indispensable source of information on the country's history. Except on Wallis and Futuna, nowhere in the Pacific was a Catholic mission so intimately tied to the country's historical evolution.

Few documents have survived from Bishop Douarre's time - and not surprisingly, as he had no permanent residence. The pro-vicar, Rougeryron, chose the presbytery of La Conception as his usual residence and, as already mentioned, it was in his time that an archive in the true sense was constituted. (A glance over this inventory - numbers AAN 6, 10, 11, 62, 130, for example - quickly demonstrates this). As the first vicar apostolic with the title of Chief of Colonial Clergy (Chef de Clerge Colonial), Bishop Vitte insisted before the colonial administration on the right to a residence in Noumea conforming with the dignity of his office. As a result, his house, measuring only nine metres by six, which had been provided by the local administration, was transformed by order of the governor into a more appropriate residence. Bishop Fraysse also resided there until December 1904 when the colonial administration confiscated it. He then moved to the presbytery of La Conception with all of the mission's papers. In 1906 Bishop Chanrion moved the archives to a new bishop's house constructed by the Catholics of the suburb of Blanchot. Since then the archives have had a permanent home in the administrative centre of the diocese, under the eyes of the bishops.

The first official archivist was Father Michel Laurenge. He made the first attempt to classify some of the records, beginning with the correspondence with the office of Propaganda in Rome, numbered C10 to D1 - D20. This numbering system has been preserved in boxes AAN 24-25. Proper conservation and general classification began from 1970 with the work of Fathers Gerard Plasman and Paul Cros. In his work in the archives, Father Cook retained the classifications that had already been decided on as far as possible - especially the classification for the parishes, AAN 28-89. On the other hand, he substantially reclassified other parts of the archives in the hope that this would make the records easier to locate.

Uninventoried Material

Researchers should note that some non-archival documents, which are not listed in the inventory, appear at the ends of some microfilm reels in this series. All are printed documents, except those on OMPA 357. The item numbers in Patrick O'Reilly's Bibliographie de la Nouvelle-Calédonie (Paris 1955) are indicated in brackets after the letters O'R where the items have been located. In such cases the bibliographical information has been abbreviated.

Associated Records

Twentythree reels of microfilm containing records relating to the former vicariate apostolic of New Caledonia have been made for the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau in the Archivio Padri Maristi, Rome. Copies are available for reference in most of the libraries named in the first paragraph of this introduction together with information sheets describing their contents. The films are numbered PMB 161-183 and contain correspondence and miscellaneous papers, 1845-1945.

Language of the Inventory

Although this introduction is in English, the text in the body of the inventory is in French. However, because previous inventories in this series were wholly in English, the same (English) conventions have been used in referring to the OMPA microfilms, eg. "OMPA 277 (Contd)" etc.

LES PAROISSES.

Description succincte de la partie la plus importante des archives de l'archevêché. Les paroisses sont données dans l'ordre alphabétique, sous les noms et subdivisions trouvées. Après le nom principal suivent ceux des chapelles (stations, sous-paroisses) qui parfois figurent dans la correspondance. La majorité des lettres sont adressées à l'évêque. Ses réponses, si conservées, suivent selon la date de la lettre. D'autres documents, concernant l'histoire de la paroisse, ont été ajoutés. Après les dates suivent les noms des auteurs principaux des lettres. Le nom Fraysse comme tel indique l'évêque; les autres Fraysses sont indiqués par leur nom de baptême.

Vicariat de la Nouvelle Caledonie. 283 pp;TS;

Cette liste, préparée par le P. Laurenge pour P.O'Reilly, Caledoniens, Répertoire bio-bibliographique de la Nouvelle Calédonie, Paris, 1953, donne les missionnaires Maristes dès les débuts de la Mission jusqu'à 1952. Pas toutes les personnages de la liste de Laurenge figurent dans cette publication. Sont mentionnés aussi les missionnaires refugés des Iles Salomons pendant la deuxième guerre mondiale. De chaque personne des notes biographiques plus ou moins longues sont données, puisées des Archives de l'Archevêché de Noumea. Les Pères sont rangés selon leur nom de famille, les Frères selon leur nom religieux.

La première date indique l'an de l'arrivée en N.Calédonie;
la seconde date indique l'an et le mode de sortie:

MNC = mort en Calédonie;

MNH = mort aux N.Hébrides;

SNC = sorti de la N.Calédonie (pour France, Sydney, etc)

SSM = sortie de la Société de Marie.

INTRODUCTION

The material described in this inventory consists of the records of the Marist Fathers' Province of Oceania held in the Oceania Marist Province Archives, 7 Lavena Road, Suva, Fiji. The material has been copied on 40 reels of microfilm numbered OMPA 361 - OMPA 400 inclusive under a project carried out by Father Theo B. Cook, SM. Details of that microfilming project and of the libraries in which copies of the microfilms have been deposited are given in the introductions to inventories of earlier microfilms in the OMPA series.

The Province of Oceania is one of many provinces (administrative units) of the Marist Fathers (Society of Mary) throughout the world. It was formed on the 28 October 1898 and covers the eight Pacific dioceses or archdioceses of Wallis/Futuna, Tonga, Samoa and Tokelau, Port Vila, Noumea, Suva, Honiara and Kiesta. Until 1966, these dioceses or archdioceses were called Vicariates Apostolic.

The Province of Oceania - like other such provinces - is under the direction of a religious priest called a provincial. He is assisted by a vice-provincial, a bursar (whose traditional title, used in this inventory, is procurator) and three or four councillors. From 1898 until the administrative headquarters of the province were moved to Suva in 1971, the provincial and his assistants resided in the Marist monastery of Villa Maria at Hunters Hill, Sydney, and/or in St. Patrick's Presbytery in the centre of Sydney. The provincial's primary duties were to maintain contact with Marist missionaries and their bishops in the Pacific either by correspondence or by personal visits and to carry out general administration for the order. The procurator was in charge of the financial management of the province, including the purchase of goods and services for missionaries in the islands.

When the province's administrative headquarters were moved to Suva, all of its records for the years before 1898 were sent to the Archivio Padri Maristi in Rome and those for the later years were sent to Suva. The records sent to Suva became the basis of the Oceania Marist Province Archives. Those records fall into the following main divisions:

- A - the provincial's office incoming letters;
- B - the provincial's office outgoing letters;
- C - the provincial's office documentation;
- D - the procurator's office incoming letters;
- E - the procurator's office outgoing letters;
- F - the procurator's office documentation.

Each of the divisions (except C) is subdivided into several smaller units among which are the various Marist regions in the Pacific. These are important sources of historical information on a wide range of subjects. Of the main divisions within the Archives, only A, B, C and part of D are covered by this inventory.

There are some substantial gaps in the archives. Large parts of divisions A and B - correspondence between 1898 and 1924 - have disappeared. What is left is listed in this inventory under A.1.1., A.2, B.1. and B.2. A letter dated 29 March 1925 from Father Eugene Courtains, successor of Father J-B Chevreuil as provincial, to the General Superior explains the absence of some material:

".....The Archives of this province are very incomplete. First of all, Chevreuil destroyed, or took with him, all his correspondence. There is not one copy of his letters left. Then not one of the letters written by missionaries to the various provincials is here. The pigeon-holes where they should be are totally empty ... Of other dossiers I give what I found ... I should add that Father Nicolas, at the end of his terms as provincial, burnt all his personal correspondence, i.e. letters written by himself. Did he destroy more? I would not know. Anyhow, Chevreuil, in those days, complained to me about the burning of such letters, and now he himself seems to have done the same ..." (B.3.)

The archives of the procurator's office, especially the correspondence with the Marist regions in the Pacific, are fairly intact from 1895. However, there is an inexplicable gap for the years 1930-39 and thereabouts.

The following provincials were in office for the period covered by this inventory:

1898 - 1900: AUGUSTIN AUBRY: was in Oceania as visitator when appointed first provincial; transferred to the general administration of the order in Lyon in 1900.

1900 - 1904: AMAND OLIER: missionary in Tonga; ordained as bishop for Tonga in 1904.

1904 - 1910: ANDRE MARION: missionary in Fiji; returned there in 1910.

1910 - 1918: CHARLES NICOLAS: missionary in Fiji; ordained as bishop for Fiji in 1918.

1918 - 1924: JEAN-BAPTISTE CHEVREUIL: missionary on Rotuma until 1908; procurator in Sydney, 1909 - 1918; later went to New Caledonia.

1924 - 1932 EUGENE COURTAIS: missionary in the New Hebrides (now Vanuatu) until 1915; then engaged in parish work in Sydney; procurator of the province, 1918 - 1924. After his term as provincial, he became general mission procurator in Lyon.

1932 - 1939: JOSEPH BERTIN: missionary in the South Solomons. After his term as provincial he went to New Caledonia.

1939 - 1947: ELIE BERGERON: missionary in Tonga until 1932; procurator until 1939. Went to Fiji after his term as provincial.

The procurators for the period covered by this inventory were:

- 1895 - 1903: AUGUSTE GUILLEMIN: missionary in New Caledonia when called to the procurator's desk in Sydney; then parish work until his death in 1905.
- 1903 - 1905: FRANCOIS HUAULT: involved in parish work in Australia before and after his short spell as procurator.
- 1905 - 1909: FRANCOIS LAURENT: missionary on Bougainville until 1904; parish work in Sydney before and after his term as procurator; later returned to Europe.
- 1909 - 1918: JEAN-BAPTISTE CHEVREUIL: see above.
- 1918 - 1924: EUGENE COURTAIS: see above.
- 1924 - 1932: JOHN RAUSCH: missionary on Bougainville until 1913; various forms of apostolic work in Australia before and after his term as procurator.
- 1932 - 1939: ELIE BERGERON: see above.
- 1939 - 1946: JOSEPH NICOLAS: missionary in Fiji; died in office as procurator.
- 1946 - 1958: HONORE HEBERT: missionary on Bougainville; died in office as procurator.

Requests for access to the original material listed in this inventory should be addressed to the Very Reverend Father Provincial, Oceania Marist Province Archives, P.O. Box 1198, Suva, Fiji.

The records described in this inventory were microfilmed by the Pacific Manuscripts Bureau in 1972. The records were then housed in the Archdiocesan Office, Nicolas House, Suva. They were filmed with the generous permission of the then archbishop of Suva, the Most Rev. G.H. Pearce, DD, SM. Copies of the films were deposited in each of the Bureau's sponsoring libraries and with Archbishop Pearce's approval, copies have also been supplied to several other university and state libraries.

The Fiji records comprise manuscript documents (filmed in the PMB series) and published documents (filmed in the PMB Doc series). In the inventory, the films of the manuscript documents are listed first.

The presence of the Catholic Church in Fiji dates back to 1844 when Father J-B. Breheret arrived there as prefect apostolic with a small band of Marist missionaries. An account of the early days of the mission and of Breheret's career will be found on microfilm PMB 453. Other microfilms contain brief histories of the mission in later times. Details of the microfilms are:
