CONTRIBUTORS

David Copp is professor of philosophy at the University of Florida. He is the author of Morality, Normativity, and Society (1995), and Morality in a Natural World (2007), as well as many articles on moral and political philosophy. He is editor of The Oxford Handbook of Ethical Theory (2006) and associate editor of Ethics.

Kirk Ludwig is professor of philosophy at the University of Florida. He is the coauthor (with Ernie Lepore) of Donald Davidson’s Truth-Theoretic Semantics (2007), and Donald Davidson: Meaning, Truth, Language and Reality (2005), and editor of Donald Davidson (2003). He publishes articles in the philosophy of mind, language and action, epistemology and metaphysics.

Pekka Mäkelä is a researcher in the Department of Social and Moral Philosophy at the University of Helsinki. He has been a visiting fellow at the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics at the Australian National University in Canberra, and he has also taught as an adjunct teacher at Florida State University. His publications have focused on collective moral responsibility and the metaphysics of social reality.

Larry May is professor of philosophy at Washington University in St. Louis, and research professor of social justice at the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics, Charles Sturt University, and the Australian National University in Canberra. He has published eight authored books, including The Morality of Groups (1987) and Sharing Responsibility (1992). He is just finishing a trilogy on the normative foundations of international criminal law: Crimes Against Humanity (2005), War Crimes and Just War (2007), and Aggression and Crimes Against Peace (forthcoming). He also has edited dozens of books, including Collective Responsibility: 50 Years of Debate in Theoretical and Applied Ethics (1991) and Groups and Group Rights (2000).

Seumas Miller is professor of philosophy at Charles Sturt University and the Australian National University, and foundation director of the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics (an Australian Research Council funded Special Research Centre). He is the author or coauthor of more than 100 academic articles and a number of books, including Social Action: A Teleological Account (2001), Ethical Issues in Policing (2005), and Terrorism and Counter-Terrorism (forthcoming).

Brook J. Sadler is an assistant professor of philosophy at the University of South Florida in Tampa. Her philosophical interests include ethical theory, meta-ethics, philosophy of love and sex, and feminist theory.
Paul Sheehy is a lecturer of philosophy at Richmond upon Thames College. His main interests are in the philosophy of the social sciences, metaphysics, and political and moral philosophy. He has published articles on social groups, collective responsibility, voting and theism and has written a monograph, The Reality of Social Groups (2006).

Kenneth Shockley is an assistant professor of philosophy at the University at Buffalo—SUNY. He has published in ethics, environmental philosophy, and social philosophy. His current research interests lie at the intersection of moral philosophy, environmental ethics, and decision theory.

Cassie Striblen is an assistant professor of philosophy at Doane College. Her primary areas of interest are social and political philosophy, ethics, and feminist theory. Her current work explores the significance of group membership to questions of moral responsibility.

Raimo Tuomela is professor of philosophy at the Department of Philosophy, University of Helsinki, Finland. His main field of research is the philosophy of social action. He is the recipient of several grants and awards, including the von Humboldt Foundation Research Award. He is currently a member of the editorial board of several journals and book series. His recent books include: The Importance of Us: A Philosophical Study of Basic Social Notions (1995), Cooperation: A Philosophical Study (2000), The Philosophy of Social Practices: A Collective Acceptance View (2002), and The Philosophy of Sociality: The Shared Point of View (2007).