Introduction

This set of references on internal migration in South East Asia does not attempt to provide more than a preliminary working bibliography on the subject, and its coverage is restricted in a number of ways. Geographically, it focusses on Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia and the Philippines, with a limited number of references to Taiwan, Hong Kong and countries of the former Indo-China region. Countries of the Indian sub-continent, Japan, Korea, and the Pacific islands including Papua New Guinea have been specifically excluded because of the volume of research published on those areas. To some extent this bibliography is complementary to Breese's (1973) Urban Southeast Asia, and a list of some related bibliographies is given in Kosinski and Prothero's (1975) People on the move. Government statistical publications have not generally been included, and the majority of references are in the English language (though some in Indonesian and Dutch have been included), so that research published in indigenous languages such as Chinese, Thai or Tagalog, or former colonial languages such as German or Dutch, are little represented and may mean significant omissions.

Because these references were assembled in the course of editing and writing a collection of studies on migration and development in five of the countries from a demographic perspective (Pryor, forthcoming-a), the list of chapters in the as yet unpublished manuscript is given in an appendix at the end.

With the possibility of publishing an updated and more comprehensive bibliography in mind for the future, interested readers are invited to supply additional references; any such assistance would be duly acknowledged.
