

- Jennifer Wellington, King's College London (until mid-September 2014)
- Daniel Steinbach, King's College London (from mid-September 2014 until September 2016)

The Editors and Authors

Editors

Helmut Bley

is emeritus professor of modern and African history at the University of Hanover, Germany. He was a visiting senior lecturer at the University of Dar Es Salaam in Tanzania and supervising chairman of the institute for African studies in Hamburg.

Anorthe Kremers

As vice head of the conferences & symposia unit at the Volkswagen Foundation in Hanover, Germany, she is responsible for the contents of the foundation's own conferences, symposia and lecture series in the humanities and the social sciences. She studied history and French at the universities of Tübingen and Grenoble.

Authors

Touraj Atabaki

is the head of the Middle East and Central Asia Desk at the International Institute of Social History, Amsterdam. He also holds the chair of the Social History of the Middle East and Central Asia at Leiden University.

Joan Beaumont

is professor at the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre at the College of Asia & the Pacific, The Australian National University, Canberra. Her research focuses on Australia in the two world wars, Australian defence and foreign policy, the history of prisoners of war and the memory and heritage of war.

Graham H. Cornwell

is a PhD candidate in History at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., where he studies the history of North Africa. He holds an MA in Middle East Studies from The George Washington University.

Santanu Das

is Reader in English at King's College London. During 2013-16, he will be leading a HERA collaborative...

with partners across Europe, including the ZMO, the Humboldt Lautarchiv and the Museum Europäische Kulturen, Berlin.

Babacar Fall

is professor at the University Cheikh Anta Diop of Dakar/Senegal and coordinator of the NGO 'Groupe pour l'Étude et l'Enseignement de la Population'. He specializes in African social history and pedagogy, education and pedagogical innovations and family life education.

Toyin Falola

is a professor at the University of Texas. He is a fellow of the Historical Society of Nigeria and a fellow of the Nigerian Academy of Letters. He has received various awards and honors, including the Jean Holloway Award for Teaching Excellence and the Ibn Khaldun Distinguished Award for Research Excellence.

Stig Förster

is professor of modern history at the University of Bern, Switzerland, and chairman of the 'Arbeitskreis Militärgeschichte'. He has particular research interests in history of war in a global perspective and history of European colonialism and imperialism.

Ulrike Freitag

is a historian of the modern Middle East and has been director of Zentrum Moderner Orient Berlin (Centre for Modern Orient Studies) and professor of Islamic Studies at Free University of Berlin since 2002.

Katja Füllberg-Stolberg

is associate professor in the Department of History, Leibniz University Hannover. She received a Ph.D. in African history and did her habilitation on the role of African Americans in the relations between Black America and Africa in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Gaurav Churiwala Garg

is a doctoral student at the Department of History at New York University. He is interested in Economic and Business histories of South Asia and how they interact with capitalism and urban processes in colonial and post-colonial India.

Patricio Geli

is a professor in the history department of the Postgraduate School, Universidad Nacional de Tres de febrero and the facultad de filosofía y Letras at the University of Buenos Aires.

Barbara Göbel

is director of the Ibero-American Institute of the Prussian Cultural Heritage Foundation in Berlin. Her main research interests are socio-environmental inequalities and conflicts Latin America, object studies and geopolitics of knowledge.

Michael Goebel

is assistant professor of global history at the Free University of Berlin. His main interest is the relationship between extra-European nationalisms and global exchange since 1880.

Chris Gratien

is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. researching the environmental history of Anatolia. He is also host and producer of Ottoman History Podcast.

Dirk Hoerder

taught at Arizona State University and from 1977 to 2008 at the University of Bremen. His areas of interest are U.S. and Canadian social history and historiography, Atlantic economies, global migrations, borderland issues and sociology of migrant acculturation.

Margaret Hutchison

is a PhD student in the School of History at the Australian National University where she is completing a thesis on the construction of memory in Australia's first official war art scheme from 1916–1922.

Oliver Janz

is professor of contemporary history at the Free University of Berlin and has been visiting professor in Berne, Trento and Rome.

Jennifer L. Jenkins

is associate professor of German and European history at the University of Toronto, where she holds a Canada Research Chair in Modern German History.

Jürgen Kocka

taught social history at the University of Bielefeld from 1973 to 1988 and history of the industrial world at the Free University of Berlin from 1988 to 2009. He was a permanent fellow of the Berlin Institute of Advanced Study (Wissenschaftskolleg) and president of the Social Science Centre Berlin (WZB).

Wilhelm Krull

is the Secretary General of the VolkswagenStiftung. His educational background is in German language and literature, political science, pedagogy, and philosophy. In October 2013 he published the book "Krieg – von allen Seiten: Prosa aus der Zeit des Ersten Weltkrieges".

Britta Lange

is a research fellow at the Institute of Cultural History and Theory, Humboldt University, Berlin. Her research project "Captured Voices" is funded by the DFG.

Nazan Maksudyan

is assistant professor at the Kemerburgaz University of Istanbul. She is interested in social history of the Late Ottoman Empire with a particular focus on children and youth. Her current research covers the social history of the First World War in the Ottoman lands.

Sara Ellinor Morack

studied history, turcology and philosophy at the Free University of Berlin and at Boğaziçi University, Istanbul, with a focus on late Ottoman history. She is currently a postdoctoral fellow of the Martin Buber Society at Hebrew University, Jerusalem.

Keith Neilson

is professor of history at the Royal Military College of Canada. His field of expertise is British foreign and defense policy from 1856 to 1945 with a particular interest in Anglo-Russian/Soviet relations. At present, he is doing research on Britain, Canada and the United States during the First World War.

Akeo Okada

is professor for musicology at Kyoto University's Institute for Research in the Humanities. He studied musicology in Osaka, Munich and Freiburg/Br. He is the organizer of the First World War Research Project together with Shin'ichi Yamamuro at Kyoto University.

Howard Phillips

is a professor in the department of historical studies at the University of Cape Town where he pioneered the teaching of the social history of health, disease and medicine to both humanities and medical students.

Graham Auman Pitts

is a doctoral candidate in History at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. His dissertation is an environmental history of modern Lebanon.

Stefan Reichmuth

is professor of Arabic and Islamic Studies at the Seminar of Oriental and Islamic Studies, Ruhr University Bochum. Major research interests have been: Arabic Dialects, Islamic learning and Arabic literature in Africa and modern and early modern Islamic history in a trans-regional perspective to name but a few.

Stefan Rinke

is professor of Latin American history at the Institute of Latin American Studies at the Friedrich-Meinecke-Institute, Free University of Berlin. His research interests include Latin American history from the sixteenth to the twenty-first centuries, Latin America in a global context and the comparative history of the Americas.

Franziska Roy

studied at Humboldt University Berlin as well as at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London and completed her doctorate in 2013 at the University of Warwick.

Jan Schmidt

did his MA studies in medieval and modern history as well as Japanese studies at the University of Heidelberg and Tokyo Gakugei University. He currently is a lecturer for modern Japanese history at the University of Bochum.

Guoqi Xu

received his PhD from Harvard University. He is currently professor of history at the University of Hong Kong.

Shin'ichi Yamamuro

is professor for political science (modern Japanese political history and history of modern legal thought) at Kyoto University's Institute for Research in the Humanities and is currently its director. Since 2007 he is heading the research project 'A Trans-Disciplinary Study of the First World War' with Akeo Okada.

Further Speakers and Chairs at the Symposium have included

Ravi Ahuja, University of Göttingen

Yiğit Akin, Tulane University

Mustafa Aksakal, Georgetown University

Katrin Bromber, Zentrum Moderner Orient, Berlin

Andreas Gestrich, German Historical Institute, London

Susanne Kuß, University of Bern

Heike Liebau, Zentrum Moderner Orient, Berlin

Michael Provence, University of California

Muhammad Ali Raza, Zentrum Moderner Orient, Berlin

Brigitte Reinwald, University of Hanover

Samiksha Sehrawat, University of Newcastle

Radhika Singha, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi