Oral Accounts 1992-1999

The use of oral accounts and storage of tapes is by permission of interviewees. Many of the tapes of conversations recorded by this author have been lodged with permission with the oral history archive of the Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies, without access restriction. Where interviewees have directed that tapes not be lodged in a public collection, the tapes were either retained by the author for reference, or returned to the interviewees, depending on the directions of the interviewee. Aboriginal people who provided information or oral accounts are also listed in the acknowledgments.

Glossary

- Aborigine* person who identifies themselves to be of Aboriginal origin (ABS Census).
- AIM* Aborigines Inland Mission, a fundamentalist Protestant missionary movement with a ministry to many Aboriginal communities in the region.
- artefact* physical relic of human activity/thought.
- assimilation* culture change of a minority by absorption into a larger group.
- Board* Aborigines Protection Board 1883-1940, Aborigines Welfare Board 1940-1969, the government body responsible for the management of indigenous people in the colony, later the state, of New South Wales.
- billycan or billy* cylindrical metal container with wire handle for making tea or boiling water.
- bundi nulla nulla* or Aboriginal wooden club.
- burbung* large gathering hosted by Wiradjuri for ceremonies of initiation into adulthood (Mathews 1897).
- camp* self-built and self-managed Aboriginal settlement. The term is adopted in its distinct colloquial meaning of any shelter or group of shelters that are self-built. Small and large camps are respectively referred to as household and community camps.
- clan* basic social unit of traditional Aboriginal society. Each clan was separate, occupied a separate territory on the ground, was distinguished by a totem, and had its own line of patrilineal descent (Radcliffe-Brown 1913).
- coconuts* Aboriginal joking slang for people "dark on the outside but white on the inside" (see also whities).
- community plan* the assumed spatial equivalent of a living community. The arrangement of household clusters and community activity zones, along with pathways and empty spaces between them (Gibbon 1984: 150).
- contact archaeology* archaeology dealing with indigenous people in the period following colonisation.
- country* land to which Aboriginal people regard themselves as having primary ties (Merlan 1998:1). Geographic area regarded as territory or home ground to an Aboriginal group.
- creolisation* culture change by interaction with a larger cultural group.
- culture* in the technical sense, an organising unit assumed in social anthropology. It assumes groups of people as units which share a learned behaviour and way of life. Rather than being used as an organising concept for studying people, it has recently become popularly imagined as a separate and concrete entity. [Other definitions include: The structure that includes knowledge, belief, art, morals, law custom, and any other capabilities and habits acquired by a person as a member of society (Tyler 1871: 1). The sum total of the knowledge, attitudes and habitual behaviour patterns shared and transmitted by the members of a particular society (Linton 1940: 466, Redfield 1953: 85). The accumulation of norms, customary beliefs, and socialisation patterns which are used in the transmission of knowledge from one generation to another (Aiello and Thompson 1980: 108).]
- diachronic* referring to a human study involving the time dimension.
- dog-tag* Exemption Certificate.
- doolagarl* human-like creature, which lives mainly in densely forested areas.
- emic* referring to interpretations in terms of distinctions made by the members of a particular society under investigation.
- ethnic group* a people who for physical, linguistic, religious, historical, political or other reasons feel themselves to be, or a felt by others to be, a distinct and separate people (Price 1968: 1).
- ethnoarchaeology* the study of material relationships within contemporary or historic societies, in order to provide tentative explanations of material relationships found in the archaeological record (Gibbon 1984: 420).

- etic* referring to interpretations in terms of distinctions made by a community of outside observers, not in terms of distinctions made by members of the society under investigation.
- full-blood* old racial term for Aboriginal person from a family without any non-Aboriginal ancestors.
- goom* "metho"(methylated spirits).
- goomi* "metho" drinker.
- government settlement* Aboriginal settlement containing structures built by government under contract, generally under government agency management.
- great man theory* the idea that changes in culture are due to the inventions and new ideas of exceptional people (Barnouw 1979: 454).
- goundji, goondie* bough shelter formed by a simple frame of branches covered with bark, leaves or grass. Goundji is a word derived from the Wiradjuri language, which in recent use has come to mean a any makeshift dwelling or shack. Also known from the Dharuk language of the Sydney region as gunyah, in Victoria and Western Australia as mia mia, in Queensland as humpy, and in South Australia as wurley (Dixon 1990: 199-203).
- half-caste* old racial term for Aboriginal person from the first generation of a mixed marriage in which one of the parents is non-Aboriginal.
- home range* network of spaces that a person uses regularly, is familiar with and feels at home with. (Brower 1980: 181). Not necessarily a defended space (territory).
- household* a person living alone or people who usually reside in a dwelling and eat together. Relationships of visitors to one another or to any resident are not considered as part of the household. (ABS Census).
- household cluster* the assumed spatial equivalent of a household, detected by the concentration of house remains, features such as pits, and small artefacts in an archaeological site (Winter 1976: 25).
- jurisdiction* temporary control of a space where the origin and limits of authority are role-related (Brower 1980: 181).
- kinship* the terms, rules and patterns by which people calculate descent, organise marriage, classify and regard one another as relatives, and as such obtain certain rights and responsibilities (Memmott 1991: 20).
- Koori* a term used by Aboriginal people for themselves. The term is not used in the text in any technical sense but as a convenient way of referring to contemporary Aboriginal people of southeastern (i.e. "settled") Australia, to distinguish them from Aboriginal populations of "remote" Australia, which contain "full-blood" Aboriginal descendants and which are commonly regarded as being more "traditional" culturally. Koori came from the Awabakal language of the Newcastle area and spread through NSW and Victoria (Dixon 1990: 169).
- mission* word adopted by Aboriginal English to mean any Aboriginal settlement self-contained from the white community. Government mission or government settlement used for secular institutions which were Aboriginal reserves with government funded buildings.
- mixed-blood* old racial term for person of mixed ancestry. Aboriginal person of part-European descent.
- Mudjarn (budjarn)* local Aboriginal name in Brungle for Pine Mountain. Affectionate term in Wiradjuri language that links dreamings (Smith and Sykes: 5).
- mudji* Wiradjuri word for animal totem adopted at initiation (Vince Bulger).
- munku* also puulpi or galingaar a type of sausage, made from the cleaned gut of sheep, kangaroo or emu (Max Johnson).
- pattern-book design* standardised building or settlement design, widely repeated.
- part-Aboriginal* Aboriginal person of part European descent.
- peppercotting* town house planning practice of interspersing Aboriginal with white housing.
- personal space* mechanism for achieving a desirable spacing between one person and another (Brower 1980: 180).

- reconstruction* of a settlement. A model, usually in the form of a scale drawing, that combines all the known and inferred elements of the site, for a particular time-frame.
- settlement pattern* the number, size, and spatial distribution of the entire range of sites that a people occupied (Gibbon 1984: 221).
- settled Australia* a term coined by Charles Rowley (1970) for Aboriginal populations in places of early European settlement, geographically distinguished from Aboriginal populations in places of later European settlement referred to as remote Australia.
- settlement system* functional role and pattern of integration of each of a people's communities within a systemic model (Flannery 1976: 162).
- site* a place where human activity is identifiable.
- slush lamp or fat lamp* small, covered tin containing fat or oil with a rag wick.
- social organisation* the way people actually interact within a community; their patterns of actual observable behaviour. Patterns of actual social relations resulting from the social structure of a culture (Gibbon 1984: 150).
- social structure* system of expected behaviours that structure interpersonal relationships within a community, system of ideas and rules within cultures about preferred or accustomed social relations (Gibbon 1984: 150).
- station* A grazing property, or an Aboriginal Station settlement run by the Aborigines Protection Board of New South Wales as a partly self-sufficient farming operation.
- super ceremony* social concentration at a European settlement acting as an attractant for further Aboriginal settlement. Ethnographic analogy with traditional ceremonies which amalgamated small and dispersed groups into one large social gathering (Baker 1990).
- super waterhole* supply of food, consumer goods and services drawing Aboriginal groups into a European settlement. Ethnographic analogy with waterholes in the arid inland acting as attractants for Aboriginal groups (Lee and DeVore 1968).
- synchronic* referring to a human study at one time period.
- system* a set of units with relationships between them.
- technology* the material equipment and technical knowledge components of a human economy (Bohannon 1963: 211).
- territoriality* relationship between an individual or group and a particular physical setting, that is characterised by a feeling of possessiveness, and by attempts to control the appearance and use of the space (Brower 1980: 180). A defended space (Morris 1978: 126).
- tribe* cluster of clans, distinguished by "possession of a name, a language, and a defined territory" (Radcliffe-Brown 1913: 144).
- vici* suburb, outside a Roman military settlement.
- villa miseria* shanty town of Latin America.
- wagga* a type of bedroll blanket self-sewn from bag cloth and rags.
- whities* white joking slang for upwardly socially mobile Aboriginal town settlers (see coconuts).
- Wiradjuri* in this work Wiradjuri has been used without the definite article. The purpose of avoiding the phrase "the Wiradjuri" is to eliminate the idea that there is any simple homogeneity of identification, views or understandings about what it means to be Wiradjuri or how one claims to be Wiradjuri. It is also to make it clear that the author makes no claim to speak for or represent all Wiradjuri and follows similar practise for referring to Ngun(n)awal in Peterson and Carr 1998: 10).
- Wiradjuri region* the geographic area (variously defined) of Wiradjuri Aboriginal language speakers at the time of European settlement. In the present work, the region is taken for convenience as the area of central New South Wales identified as Wiradjuri tribal territory in Dr. Tindale's tribal map (1974).
- world view* a term coined by Robert Redfield (1955: 81-95) to describe a community's ethos or outlook on life; the way people characteristically look out upon the world.

Key

The columns in the artefact record spreadsheets are fairly self-explanatory, and take the following form:

Site - each site is given a code, eg M1 = Russell hut near Rye Park.

Location - usually a location within a household cluster, eg H03 = household number 3, or within a site feature eg S04 = site feature number 4.

Artefact - a reference number assigned to artefact within a site.

Code - a functional category assigned to each artefact, there are 26 categories, one for each letter of the alphabet (for fuller elaboration refer Murrumbidgee: 9-10, Lachlan: 15, and the thesis chapter on "Domestic Refuse and Daily Life".

Age - a time period assigned to each artefact. There are 6 nominated time periods: Ab, Col, E20, M20, L20, REC (refer Murrumbidgee: 9-10 for elaboration).

Material - This is a summary of what material item the artefact may represent, eg. a piece of a flue may be listed as representing a chimney.

Description - Notes including dimensions in millimetres, initials of oral informants, and several abbreviations such as "E-ware" for earthenware, "E-transfer" for Staffordshire type earthenware of monochrome transfer pattern, "cl." for clear, "poss" for possibly.

In addition, two artefact scatters were recorded on a modified version of the artefact record spreadsheet that provides columns for length/width/thickness measurements in millimetres, number of negative flake scars, and class of stone artefact (i.e. whether primary, secondary or tertiary artefact).
